Wilbanks Breaks Down as He Describes Shooting

LIFE OF MARITAL MISERY RELATED IN MURDER TRIAL

DRAMATIC APPEAL ENDS TESTIMONY

Defense Closes Case, Which Is Expected To Go to Jury Late This Afternoon.

Iron reserve shattered as he recounted in graphic style his story of the fatal shooting of his wife, Patrolman W. C. Wilbanks, 59, father of seven children, on trial for his life in Fulton superior court, Friday afternoon on the witness stand sobbed out details of a life of marital turmoil and hardships.

He told of years of hardships which he suffered since marrying his second wife and charged that she attempted several times to take his life.

Finishing his testimony, Wilbanks turned to the jury and dramatically cried:

"Gentlemen, so help me God, I've told you the truth."

Following the statement of the defendant, the defense rested, and the state began preparation for rebuttal. Judge Howard recessed court until 9 o'clock this morning.

Following the rebuttal of the state, the defense will open surrebuttal, followed by arguments of attorneys, which will consume about four hours. The case is expected to reach the jury early this afternoon.

Tense Silence Rules.

A packed courtroom listened in tense silence to the dramatic story and its climaxing appeal as voiced by the Atlanta policeman on the witness stand late Friday in his own defense. One of the high points of his testimony was reached when Wilbanks described attempts to get his wife interested in religious work, saying that he believed it would take her mind off of worry.

"Finally I persuaded her to join the church," he said, "and we lived happily for one week."

He declared that within a short time after their marriage, Mrs. Wil-

French Engineer Sets Forth Advantages of Concrete Automobile.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Paris, January 15.—In placing your order for a new car, consider the merits of a snappy one-piece body of reinforced concrete.

This sprightly little model of closed car made its appearance today and not a nail, screw, tin, zinc, silver or wood entered the composition of the carriage work. The achievement belongs to M. de Groutiard, an engineer, to whom credit is due, and who profited from the use of reinforced cement in building ships. He casts the entire body in one piece, pouring it into an expertly moulded wooden form containing a fine web of steel and wire. The hardened body, freed from the forms, is clamped to the chassis. The floors are of cement, with steel hinges.

"Our cars may be heavy, but no metal can touch you. Try setting fire to one of them. In case you are hit and chipped a little plaster and a trowel will cover up the traces in a jiffy. Heaven help the fellow foolish enough to run into you," said the inventor.

"SUDDEN DEATH" DINNER TONIGHT

New York, January 15.—A "sudden death" dinner to celebrate the sixth anniversary of prohibition will be given at the Hotel McAlpin by the Anti-Saloon league Saturday night, with "Pussyfoot" Johnson as the guest of honor.

The "sudden death" reference is to some demonstrations which are expected to show in dramatic form the evil effects of alcohol. Plans will be adopted for a "showdown exposition" next June, when it is the intention of the prohibitionists to give the public "for the first time the true facts concerning the prohibition issue."

Washington, January 15.—(AP)—The only white house response today to an inquiry whether President Coolidge cared to comment on prohibition, which went into effect just six years ago, was that he had nothing to say.

Washington, January 15.—(AP)—The sixth anniversary of prohibition was hailed by Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon league, as showing the consumption of alcohol lowered to a small fraction of its former total, the health of the nation improved, the saloon "and the pauperism and slums" which clustered around it a thing of the past.

"The newly issued census figures," he said, "show a 55 per cent decrease in drunkenness commitments in 1923 compared with 1910. Later figures show this decrease continued through 1925.

"America's sobriety is far ahead of European nations cited by wets as evidence of the superiority of license. The ratio of drunkenness convictions in England and Wales was 200 per 100,000 population in 1923. The ratio of such convictions in the United States was 83.1 in the same year, 1923, according to the census bureau. RECORDS PROVE THAT WASHINGTON MADE HIS LIQUOR

New York, January 15.—(AP)—The controversy occasioned by the speech at Washington of Rupert Hughes, novelist and author, in which he said that George Washington drank liquor, danced and swore, brought forth today a recipe for "small beer," which Washington wrote in 1757. The formula is now in the New York public library, but was only identified as his work five years ago. The recipe is in a 17-page memorandum book and was written when Washington was raising two Virginia regiments in the last of the inter-colonial wars with the French.

Further evidence concerning the habits of the first president also is given in a letter to his nephew, William Augustine Washington, written February 27, 1798. This letter gives his recipe for making whisky and tells what cereals he favored.

However, Washington did not countenance drinking among his employees. In a letter to one of them he wrote:

"The surest way to avoid evil is—first ,to refrain from drink, which is the source of all evil and the ruin of half the workmen in the country—and, next, to avoid bad company, which is the bane of good morals, economy and industry."

Washington, January 15.—A filibuster to prevent immediate voting on the entry of the United States into the world court began in the senate this afternoon.

It was so effective that at 5 o'clock, the senate, worn out with words, adjourned until noon tomorrow and opponents of the court went home with the satisfied consciousness that they had gained another day in their effort to delay the vote until after the senate shall have taken up and disposed of the tax bill. That measure must be brought before the senate in a few days.

Consideration of it will not end—by present prospects—until nearly March.

Blease Opens Battle.

The opening gun in the fight of the filibusters was discharged by the new southern senator, Cole Blease, democrat, of South Carolina, who heralds himself to the senate as "the only southern senator who is opposed to the world court."

At 3:30 o'clock Senator Blease closed an hour and a half of exegesis—clause by clause—Washington's farewell address with the words:

"It is now 3:30 o'clock. Like a good soldier, I have obeyed orders and done my duty. Therefore, I shall close for the present, but I now give the senate notice that I shall resume my remarks whenever duty calls."

In other words, Senator Blease had been directed by the managers of the opposition to world court, conspicuous among whom is Senator Borah, to "talk until 3:30," and he had done so. He is ebullient, tireless, full of words.

HOUSE RATIFIES ITALY DEBT PACT

Adherents of Agreement Win by Large Majority After Four Days' Debate on Settlement.

Washington, January 15.—(United News.)—The house has ratified the terms of settlement for the two-billion dollar Italian war debt which were accepted by the American commission during the congressional recess.

The vote, which came Thursday at the end of four days of debate, was 257 to 133, the opposition showing less strength than had been expected in view of the assault on the pact, which was very bitter at times.

The measure accepting the Italian settlement will go now to the senate, where it has been criticized severely. The house will proceed with the other five pacts negotiated during the recess, which include that with Belgium.

The opposition came principally from the democrats, who were joined by a handful of republicans. Among the democrats to join in opposing ratification in the last few minutes of debate was the minority floor leader, Garrett, of Tennessee, who emphasized that he was speaking individually and not for his party.

RUMANIAN STAGE IS SET TO DEPOSE KING FERDINAND

PRESENT REGIME SPLIT THREE WAYS

38 Rumanian Generals Said To Have Been Dismissed for Demonstrations Favoring Carol.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Paris, January 15.—The following dispatch, which passed the Rumanian censors, is the first news reaching the outside world, revealing the fact that the stage is being set in Bucharest to depose old King Ferdinand—a Hohenzollern ruler.

From The Tribune correspondent's reference to the fact that a certain coterie in the capital want the king to reign on and the insistence that he is well enough and not too old, it is evident that arrangements are being made for the immediate establishment of a regency.

The fact that Prince Carol has sold his property and is disposing of the proceeds also indicate that he is aware of the plot to force him to renounce the rights to his throne, which will be sprung when the conspirators are ready to force King Ferdinand out, and wish to become regents for the infant, instead of facing Carol's opposition.

BY LORIMER HAMMOND.
(Copyright, 1926, by The Chicago Tribune.)

Bucharest, Rumania, January 15.—A royal family row is going on behind locked doors in King Ferdinand's palace. The bone of contention seems to be whether the family can stand the stigma of a divorce.

Princess Helene is determined to sever her marriage ties legally on the ground of Prince Carol's desertion, while the king, queen and ministers are bending every effort to prevent this. Thus far, the beautiful young Greek princess, who is rapidly going blind, is stubborn and there is little hope of avoiding the divorce, if she is permitted to have her own way.

Princess Helene is reported to be softening toward Prince Carol since the return yesterday of Queen Marie from Belgrade, where she went to confer on the abdication of her son, as the queen's influence on her daughter-in-law is said to be stronger than any other.

Seeks Touch With Carol.

The Rumanian minister to France, M. Vintila Bratiano, a brother of the premier, left last night for Paris, ostensibly to meet M. Nicholas Titulesco, the minister at London, who has been in Washington discussing the settlement of the Rumanian debt, but it is rumored here that his real object is to get in touch with Prince Carol in Italy.

Though the common version of the renunciation of the throne stresses Prince Carol's past gallantries and attributed the action to erotic motives, there is a substantial theory prevalent that the affair is more than a mere petticoat escapade.

LANGLEY ARRIVES HERE THIS MORNING TO BEGIN SENTENCE

Cincinnati, Ohio, January 15.—(AP) Former Congressman John W. Langley left for Atlanta penitentiary over the Southern railroad at 6:45 o'clock tonight, to begin his two-year sentence on a charge of conspiracy to violate the national prohibition law.

When Mr. Langley boarded the train, he was accompanied by Oscar Flannery, his nephew, who will make the entire trip. At Lexington, he will be met by Roy B. Williams, United States district attorney, who will escort the former congressman to the penitentiary. Mrs. Langley also will meet her husband at Lexington and bid him good-bye. She will not make the trip to Atlanta.

The train on which the former congressman left Cincinnati is due to arrive at Atlanta at 8:25 o'clock tomorrow morning.

LEAGUE MEDIATION SUGGESTED TO END ITALIAN-PAPAL ROW

Small State Inside Rome, In Which Pope Would Rule as League Mandatory, Is Proposed.

Rome, January 15.—(AP)—The good offices of the League of Nations would offer the best chance for a mutually satisfactory solution of the difficult problem of the relations of the papacy and the Italian state, a cardinal, who occupies an important position in the Sacred college, said today. The cardinal insisted that his identity not be revealed.

He said that the League of Nations constituted the best instrument for bridging over the difficulties which hitherto have prevented the healing of the breach between church and state, caused in 1870 by the destruction of the pope's temporal power. All these difficulties would be dismissed, this prince of the church explained, if Italy permitted the creation within the confines of the city of Rome of a small papal state, in which the pope would rule as a mandatory of the League of Nations.

The idea of the creation of such a state is novel in the suggestion that the league might offer its mediation. The suggestion is considered to answer the objections that have stood in the way of the creation of a papal state. In well-informed quarters, it is said that this plan offers an excellent solution, considering the closer relations already existing between the church and the fascist government.

Thus far, the only basis for further reconciliation lies in the vatican's expressed wish for the abolition of the law of guarantees, by which the Italian state defined the status of the church. This law gave the pope a status equal to that of the king of Italy and was intended to grant the papacy everything it could desire, but the vatican has never accepted it, the pope preferring his voluntary imprisonment. Now, however, it is considered entirely possible that the fascist government will repeal this law, being only too wiling to cast ridicule on what it calls one of the masterpieces of liberal statecraft.

CARDINAL'S CONDITION REMAINS UNCHANGED

Brussels, January 16.—There has been no change in the grave condition of Cardinal Mercier, who underwent an abdominal operation a month ago.

At midnight Friday, the cardinal was sleeping quietly. Earlier in the day he suddenly became worse and was unable to retain food.

Sues Because Picture Used In Beauty Ad

$500,000 Asked by Society Woman for Ridicule Heaped on Her.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Chicago, January 15.—Mrs. A. D. Plamondon, Jr., asked $500,000 damages today in a St. Louis, Mo., court, alleging her wedding picture was used in an advertisement under the caption, "How I Won the Man I Love."

Mrs. Plamondon, who, before her marriage in 1922, which was one of the social events of the year, was Miss Ruth Wilk, daughter of Frederick Louis Wilk, vice president of the Union Trust bank, declared use of her picture was wholly unauthorized. It was used, she declared, in the last issue of the Butterick quarterly by the Psychology Press of St. Louis.

Its purpose was in exploiting a book entitled: "Secrets of Fascinating Womanhood," which purports to deal in the psychology of feminine attractiveness and claiming to show "how any woman who understands certain peculiarities about man's psychology can attract and win the love of practically any man she chooses."

Beneath the picture of Mrs. Plamondon, which did not carry any name, the advertisement read:

"How a demure little wren of a girl was changed almost overnight into an attractive bird of paradise woman, how she had been neglected by her young men acquaintances, suddenly became the center of attraction and in a few weeks the radiant bride of the man she had loved in vain for years."

Her picture, coupled with such words, caused Mrs. Plamondon to be exposed to public ridicule, contempt and disgrace, and has greatly injured her name and reputation, her bill of complaint declares.

Her suit was directed against the Butterick Publishing company, publishers of the Ladies' Fashion Magazine, in which the Psychology Press advertisement appeared.

GREAT-GRANDSON ATTENDS MAN, 89, AT HIS WEDDING

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Chicago, January 15.—It is not often that a bridegroom has, as an attendant at his wedding, his own great-grandson, but that was the good fortune of Allen B. Wrisley, 89-years-old, for 60 years president of the Allen B. Wrisley Soap company. His bride was Elizabeth Ludwig, of Maywood, who admits 50 summers. Refusing to answer any definite questions as to their plans, the happy couple set out for Asheville, North Carolina, on a honeymoon.

The couple were married at the home of his grandson, Wrisley B. Oleson, in Glen Ellyn, and Dunlap Olesen, a great-grandson was his chief attendant.

FARMERS' COUNCIL OPPOSED TO LAWS ON CROP SURPLUS

Committee Appointed To Study Problem and Report Findings to Executive Committee.

Washington, January 15.—(AP)—The fourth national conference of the National Council of Farmers' Cooperative Marketing Associations went on record at its concluding session today as opposed to any legislation at this time dealing with surplus farm products.

In adopting the report of its legislative committee, which recommended such a course, the conference upheld the views of Robert W. Bingham, of Louisville, chairman of the national council, and Aaron Sapiro, the council's legal adviser, who had urged that the question be left to the farmers themselves to meet through extended cooperative organization. Former Governor Lowden, of Illinois, and other members of the group favoring legislative aid in tackling the problem were absent from the floor when the conference took its action.

Eight to Study Problem.

The report provided for appointment of eight to study the surplus problem and report to the council's executive committee. Its findings will be made the basis of a referendum vote among the cooperative associations, which will determine the organization's policy on the subject.

Mr. Lowden, who had sought approval by the conference of some form of legislation to take care of the surplus phase of farm relief, was understood to have remained away from the final session as a form of protest.

Indorse Haugen Bill.

The conference unanimously indorsed the Haugen bill, which is backed by the administration, and provides for a division of cooperative marketing in the department of agriculture, with an appropriation of $225,000 for its maintenance and operation. This bill was favorably reported today by the house agriculture committee, and Chairman Haugen said he expected to get it before the house next week.

The conference adopted a resolution asking that the secretary of agriculture give special attention to requests of several wheat growers' cooperatives for changes in the rules governing grain gradings, operation of warehouses and grain exchanges.

All officers of the council were reelected.

"No Sufficient Justification for Interference," Declares Walker in Refusing To Act.

APPEAL FOR MERCY OPPOSED BY STATE

Governor Reaches Decision Only a Few Hours After Prison Commission Makes Ruling.

Gervis Bloodworth and Willie Jones, Taylor county youths sentenced to die on the gallows for the slaying of Howard Underwood, in December, 1923, will pay the penalty for their crime in the Muscogee county jail at Columbus on January 29.

This was assured Friday night when Governor Clifford Walker declined to grant commutation of the death sentence of the doomed youths. Only a few hours earlier the state prison commission had held a hearing and formally declined to recommend executive clemency.

Homer Beeland, attorney for Jones and Bloodworth, stated prior to the governor's action that if executive mercy was declined he planned no further legal action to prevent execution of the youths.

Governor's Statement.

In refusing to interfere with the decision of the courts in the 2-year legal battle to hang the two boys, Governor Walker issued the following statement:

"I find no sufficient legal justification for interfering with the judgment of the court. Therefore, clemency is denied in this case.

Hearing of the plea for commutation was held by the prison commission Friday morning. The commission acted on the case almost immediately, sending its refusal to recommend mercy to the governor's

Paris, January 15.—The following dispatch, which passed the Rumanian censors, is the first news reaching the outside world, revealing the fact that the stage is being set in Bucharest to depose old King Ferdinand—a Hohenzollern ruler.

From The Tribune correspondent's reference to the fact that a certain coterie in the capital want the king to reign on and the insistence that he is well enough and not too old, it is evident that arrangements are being made for the immediate establishment of a regency.

The fact that Prince Carol has sold his property and is disposing of the proceeds also indicate that he is aware of the plot to force him to renounce the rights to his throne, which will be sprung when the conspirators are ready to force King Ferdinand out, and wish to become regents for the infant, instead of facing Carol's opposition.

(Copyright, 1926, by The Chicago Tribune.)

Bucharest, Rumania, January 15.—A royal family row is going on behind locked doors in King Ferdinand's palace. The bone of contention seems to be whether the family can stand the stigma of a divorce.

Princess Helene is determined to sever her marriage ties legally on the ground of Prince Carol's desertion, while the king, queen and ministers are bending every effort to prevent this. Thus far, the beautiful young Greek princess, who is rapidly going blind, is stubborn and there is little hope of avoiding the divorce, if she is permitted to have her own way.

Princess Helene is reported to be softening toward Prince Carol since the return yesterday of Queen Marie from Belgrade, where she went to confer on the abdication of her son, as the queen's influence on her daughter-in-law is said to be stronger than any other.

Seeks Touch With Carol.

The Rumanian minister to France, M. Vintila Bratiano, a brother of the premier, left last night for Paris, ostensibly to meet M. Nicholas Titulesco, the minister at London, who has been in Washington discussing the settlement of the Rumanian debt, but it is rumored here that his real object is to get in touch with Prince Carol in Italy.

Though the common version of the renunciation of the throne stresses Prince Carol's past gallantries and attributed the action to erotic motives, there is a substantial theory prevalent that the affair is more than a mere petticoat escapade.

Cincinnati, Ohio, January 15.—(AP) Former Congressman John W. Langley left for Atlanta penitentiary over the Southern railroad at 6:45 o'clock tonight, to begin his two-year sentence on a charge of conspiracy to violate the national prohibition law.

When Mr. Langley boarded the train, he was accompanied by Oscar Flannery, his nephew, who will make the entire trip. At Lexington, he will be met by Roy B. Williams, United States district attorney, who will escort the former congressman to the penitentiary. Mrs. Langley also will meet her husband at Lexington and bid him good-bye. She will not make the trip to Atlanta.

The train on which the former congressman left Cincinnati is due to arrive at Atlanta at 8:25 o'clock tomorrow morning.

LEAGUE MEDIATION SUGGESTED TO END ITALIAN-PAPAL ROW

Small State Inside Rome, In Which Pope Would Rule as League Mandatory, Is Proposed.

Rome, January 15.—(AP)—The good offices of the League of Nations would offer the best chance for a mutually satisfactory solution of the difficult problem of the relations of the papacy and the Italian state, a cardinal, who occupies an important position in the Sacred college, said today. The cardinal insisted that his identity not be revealed.

He said that the League of Nations constituted the best instrument for bridging over the difficulties which hitherto have prevented the healing of the breach between church and state, caused in 1870 by the destruction of the pope's temporal power. All these difficulties would be dismissed, this prince of the church explained, if Italy permitted the creation within the confines of the city of Rome of a small papal state, in which the pope would rule as a mandatory of the League of Nations.

The idea of the creation of such a state is novel in the suggestion that the league might offer its mediation. The suggestion is considered to answer the objections that have stood in the way of the creation of a papal state. In well-informed quarters, it is said that this plan offers an excellent solution, considering the closer relations already existing between the church and the fascist government.

Thus far, the only basis for further reconciliation lies in the vatican's expressed wish for the abolition of the law of guarantees, by which the Italian state defined the status of the church. This law gave the pope a status equal to that of the king of Italy and was intended to grant the papacy everything it could desire, but the vatican has never accepted it, the pope preferring his voluntary imprisonment. Now, however, it is considered entirely possible that the fascist government will repeal this law, being only too wiling to cast ridicule on what it calls one of the masterpieces of liberal statecraft.

CARDINAL'S CONDITION REMAINS UNCHANGED

Brussels, January 16.—There has been no change in the grave condition of Cardinal Mercier, who underwent an abdominal operation a month ago.

At midnight Friday, the cardinal was sleeping quietly. Earlier in the day he suddenly became worse and was unable to retain food.

Sues Because Picture Used In Beauty Ad

$500,000 Asked by Society Woman for Ridicule Heaped on Her.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Chicago, January 15.—Mrs. A. D. Plamondon, Jr., asked $500,000 damages today in a St. Louis, Mo., court, alleging her wedding picture was used in an advertisement under the caption, "How I Won the Man I Love."

Mrs. Plamondon, who, before her marriage in 1922, which was one of the social events of the year, was Miss Ruth Wilk, daughter of Frederick Louis Wilk, vice president of the Union Trust bank, declared use of her picture was wholly unauthorized. It was used, she declared, in the last issue of the Butterick quarterly by the Psychology Press of St. Louis.

Its purpose was in exploiting a book entitled: "Secrets of Fascinating Womanhood," which purports to deal in the psychology of feminine attractiveness and claiming to show "how any woman who understands certain peculiarities about man's psychology can attract and win the love of practically any man she chooses."

Beneath the picture of Mrs. Plamondon, which did not carry any name, the advertisement read:

"How a demure little wren of a girl was changed almost overnight into an attractive bird of paradise woman, how she had been neglected by her young men acquaintances, suddenly became the center of attraction and in a few weeks the radiant bride of the man she had loved in vain for years."

Her picture, coupled with such words, caused Mrs. Plamondon to be exposed to public ridicule, contempt and disgrace, and has greatly injured her name and reputation, her bill of complaint declares.

Her suit was directed against the Butterick Publishing company, publishers of the Ladies' Fashion Magazine, in which the Psychology Press advertisement appeared.

GREAT-GRANDSON ATTENDS MAN, 89, AT HIS WEDDING

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Chicago, January 15.—It is not often that a bridegroom has, as an attendant at his wedding, his own great-grandson, but that was the good fortune of Allen B. Wrisley, 89-years-old, for 60 years president of the Allen B. Wrisley Soap company. His bride was Elizabeth Ludwig, of Maywood, who admits 50 summers. Refusing to answer any definite questions as to their plans, the happy couple set out for Asheville, North Carolina, on a honeymoon.

FARMERS' COUNCIL OPPOSED TO LAWS ON CROP SURPLUS

Committee Appointed To Study Problem and Report Findings to Executive Committee.

Washington, January 15.—(AP)—The fourth national conference of the National Council of Farmers' Cooperative Marketing Associations went on record at its concluding session today as opposed to any legislation at this time dealing with surplus farm products.

In adopting the report of its legislative committee, which recommended such a course, the conference upheld the views of Robert W. Bingham, of Louisville, chairman of the national council, and Aaron Sapiro, the council's legal adviser, who had urged that the question be left to the farmers themselves to meet through extended cooperative organization. Former Governor Lowden, of Illinois, and other members of the group favoring legislative aid in tackling the problem were absent from the floor when the conference took its action.

Eight to Study Problem.

The report provided for appointment of eight to study the surplus problem and report to the council's executive committee. Its findings will be made the basis of a referendum vote among the cooperative associations, which will determine the organization's policy on the subject.

Mr. Lowden, who had sought approval by the conference of some form of legislation to take care of the surplus phase of farm relief, was understood to have remained away from the final session as a form of protest.

Indorse Haugen Bill.

The conference unanimously indorsed the Haugen bill, which is backed by the administration, and provides for a division of cooperative marketing in the department of agriculture, with an appropriation of $225,000 for its maintenance and operation. This bill was favorably reported today by the house agriculture committee, and Chairman Haugen said he expected to get it before the house next week.

The conference adopted a resolution asking that the secretary of agriculture give special attention to requests of several wheat growers' cooperatives for changes in the rules governing grain gradings, operation of warehouses and grain exchanges.

All officers of the council were re-elected.

"No Sufficient Justification for Interference," Declares Walker in Refusing To Act.

APPEAL FOR MERCY OPPOSED BY STATE

Governor Reaches Decision Only a Few Hours After Prison Commission Makes Ruling.

Gervis Bloodworth and Willie Jones, Taylor county youths sentenced to die on the gallows for the slaying of Howard Underwood, in December, 1923, will pay the penalty for their crime in the Muscogee county jail at Columbus on January 29.

This was assured Friday night when Governor Clifford Walker declined to grant commutation of the death sentence of the doomed youths. Only a few hours earlier the state prison commission had held a hearing and formally declined to recommend executive clemency.

Homer Beeland, attorney for Jones and Bloodworth, stated prior to the governor's action that if executive mercy was declined he planned no further legal action to prevent execution of the youths.

Governor's Statement.

In refusing to interfere with the decision of the courts in the 2-year legal battle to hang the two boys, Governor Walker issued the following statement:

"I find no sufficient legal justification for interfering with the judgment of the court. Therefore, clemency is denied in this case.

Hearing of the plea for commutation was held by the prison commission Friday morning. The commission acted on the case almost immediately, sending its refusal to recommend mercy to the governor's

VICTIM OF FLAMES REPORTED IMPROVED

The condition of J. W. Holmes, of 218 St. Charles avenue, who was seriously injured early Thursday in a fire which practically destroyed his home, Friday was reported my physicians at Grady hospital to be greatly improved. Strong hopes are held for his recovery.

Mr. Holmes was found unconscious on the floor of his home as firemen burst into the flaming structure. He was revived by use of a pulmotor.

PLANNING COMMISSION TO CONSIDER CHANGES

The city planning commission at its next meeting a week from Monday is to consider a petition filed by Eugene Ragland asking that the northwest corner of East North avenue and Euclid avenue be changed from a residential to a business zone.

Another petition was filed seeking to change the northwest corner of DeKalb avenue and Elmira street from residential to business.

BIBB NEGRO FREED ON MURDER COUNT

Robert Hill, negro, charged with the murder of J. W. Culpepper, of Bibb county, on the night of December 30, 1923, late Friday afternoon was freed by a jury in Judge John D. Humphries' division of Fulton superior court, after that body had debated the case for about four and a half hours.

Hill was tried in Fulton court on a change of venue. He was charged with shooting Culpepper and assaulting Culpepper's woman companion. He was convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment several months ago in Judge G. H. Howard's division of Fulton superior court, but obtained a new trial on technical grounds. He also was tried on the assault charge, but the jury was unable to agree.

Testimony in the case was completed Thursday. Arguments of attorneys were heard Friday morning. Judge Humphries then charged the jury and the case went to it.

WILBANKS BREAKS DOWN ON STAND

banks had one of her "spells," which physicians diagnosed as dementia resulting from a social disease. During the illness, Mrs. Wilbanks told her husband that she married him for a purpose and that he would never know what it was, but that she did not love him, Wilbanks testified.

"At times she would go almost insane and on many occasions she threatened to kill me and take her own life," he said. "On one occasion I tried to go to see one of my daughters at the Georgia Baptist hospital who was dying. She threatened to kill me then and attempted to get a revolver which was lying on the table in the room. It took all the efforts of me and my grandson, Leo Waldrip, to keep her from carrying this into effect," he declared.

He told of her making wine in the house and declared that she had brought back ingredients from Cincinnati, where she had gone to visit her daughter, just before the fatal shooting.

After one of the "spells" she would repent and beg for forgiveness, he said. "I would put my arms around her and do everything possible to quiet her and would beg her never to do such things again," Wilbanks sobbed.

Christmas Eve Incident.

He described a scene in the home on Christmas eve when they had trouble and the wife refused to sleep in the same room with him.

He declared that Mrs. Wilbanks made so much trouble that they were forced to move from two places, due to the neighbors' complaints.

"Her ungovernable temper during her 'spells' caused such trouble as this," he said.

Wilbanks testified that he made every effort towards giving her medical relief, but she refused treatment. At one time he took her to Grady hospital for treatment, but she left before physicians had completed the treatment, he declared. He also described several attempts to take her to a mental specialist and her refusal.

His testimony concluded the defense and the case was rested following his statement. Wilbanks followed a large number of defense witnesses to the stand during the day. Attorney Sam Hewlett, chief counsel for the defense, constantly attempted to show through these witnesses that Mrs. Wilbanks was insane at the time of her death, and that she committed suicide.

Dr. Luther Vinton and Dr. S. H. Dillon, the first two witnesses called by the defense, testified they had treated Mrs. Wilbanks in 1924 and that she was suffering from a social disease which impaired her mentally. Both testified that she had refused treatment for her disease.

Would Doubt Statement.

Both the physicians declared that they would not believe a dying statement made by a person suffering from so malignant a disease. They stated that a "lucid interval" was possible, but that it was not probable, and that therefore they would not place credence in her statement to doctors just before she died.

W. F. Deering, connected with an Atlanta undertaking company, which handled Mrs. Wilbanks' body, declared that there were no powder burns.

Attorney Sam Hewlett, leading counsel of the defense, declared that he had been "entrapped" by the witness. He said he had been told by him prior to the trial that "certain marks on the woman were the result of powder burns."

Lamar Poole, former chief of detectives, and J. W. Maddox, former policeman, were the next witnesses. They testified to the good character of the defendant.

Said Woman Was Irrational.

Joe R. Broadnax told the jury that he met Mrs. Wilbanks just a few days before the killing, and that she seemed to be irrational. He said he talked with her and she said "I guess I had too much Christmas for I got the wrong gun Christmas and shot all the cartridges out of my husband's gun. This might make one kill her husband sometime."

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Kunianski, with whom the Wilbanks lived for a short time soon after their marriage, testified that Mrs. Wilbanks sometimes got drunk and that she had a bad temper. Mrs. Kunianski declared that Mrs. Wilbanks told her she used the liquors to relieve her suffering.

Mrs. Elizabeth White testified that she lived in the same house with the Wilbanks in June and July of last year and that Wilbanks treated his wife "like a sweetheart," and was gentle, kind and considerate.

Alvin Richards and Hewitt Chambers, attorneys, declared that Mrs. Wilbanks had come to them in an effort to have certain members of Mr. Wilbanks' family prosecuted on charges of poisoning her. Mrs. Wilbanks was unable to explain the poisoning and they referred her to the solicitor's office.

She interviewed Assistant Solicitor General John Hudson, according to Mr. Hudson's statement, when he was recalled to the stand, but he admitted that her charges were indefinite and he was unable to take any action.

"Threatened Life."

Leo Waldrip, grandson of Wilbanks, stated that he had heard Mrs. Wilbanks threaten the life of the defendant, and that when he wanted to go to see his daughter who was dying at an Atlanta hospital, she declared she would kill him if he went, and did try to shoot him. Waldrip said he helped quiet her so Wilbanks could go to his daughter.

Dr. L. N. Huff also was a character witness.

Mrs. Mary F. Cooper, daughter of the accused man, took the stand in defense of her father, and told in a graphic manner of his efforts to live "peacefully with his wife." She said she lived in the same house with the Wilbanks for a time.

Policeman J. R. Palmer, Lieutenant Reed, of the police department, and Sergeant O. R. Jones, also of the department, all testified to the good character of the defendant.

Mrs. W. H. Alexander, sister of the slain woman, testified that she heard Wilbanks threaten to "kill my sister" when she was a visitor in the Wilbanks home in February, 1923.

Attorney Hewlett summed up the defense case after the state had introduced clothing of the dead woman, pictures of the room in which she was shot, the mattress of the bed on which she lay when wounded, a "home brew" outfit, and pieces of the bullet-riddled plaster wall, which were cut from the room. The state rested at this point at 11:15 o'clock Friday morning.

Case of Defense.

The defense contends that the shots were fired by Mrs. Wilbanks in one of her "spells," which doctors diagnosed as paresis, and that she was in such a mental condition that she was incompetent to make "any truthful statement as to the facts of the tragedy."

During the trial Friday Wilbanks was surrounded by his six daughters, Mrs. S. L. Cooper, Mrs. R. D. Dicknison, Mrs. W. W. Knight, Mrs. C. H. Compton, Mrs. Cora Knight and Mrs. Flora Meadow.

DEMOCRAT CHAIRMAN NAMES COMMITTEE

Washington, January 15.—(AP)—Senator Gerry, of Rhode Island, the new chairman of the democratic senatorial campaign committee, announced the other members of that committee. They are: Senators Swanson, of Virginia; Pittman, Nevada; Jones, New Mexico; Kendrick, Wyoming; Harrison, Mississippi, and Bayard, Delaware.

Upshaw and New York Solon Debate Prohibition in Verse

(Editor's note: Saturday being the sixth anniversary of prohibition, the United News asked Representative Cellar, New York, democrat, and a prominent opponent of prohibition, and Representative Upshaw, Georgia, democrat, and a well-known prohibitionist, to debate in verse.)

AFFIRMATIVE.
By Representative William D. Upshaw.

Out of the womb of our wondrous past—
Out of a night too dark to last—
Free from the chains of our nation's wrong,
We rise today with a newborn song!
The years are six since freedom came—
Legal freedom from liquor's shame:
Is sometimes seen in sorrow's hearse,
We thank the God of dawning light
That law is on the side of right!

And just as sure as battling truth
Throws guardian arms about your youth—
Just as sure as now we stand
For God and home and native land,
Cowards soon shall be disowned—
Outlaws soon shall be dethroned!
And our stainless flag that cannot trail
To foreign foe or leaden hail,
Shall conquer with its stars unfurled,
And lead all flags to a sober world!

NEGATIVE.
By Representative Emmanuel Celler.

Prohibition is all awry,
Its years are six too many,
There are still more stills of rock and rye,
Than cats are in Kilkenny.

Prohibition is all awry,
Its birth has caused damnation,
Its father was the scamp, Paul Pry,
Its mother Carrie Nation.

Oh, they've got liquor, and by international agreement it can be trucked up to them from the port at Baltimore, so that they can get drunk on Christmas day, and have a high old time, and abuse our women, and desecrate our laws. Oh, yes, that's international courtesy! Great God, what a country!"

Against World Court.

The senator is not satisfied with the composition of the world court, and said:

"All those foreign judges could sit up there on the bench and cuss out the one American judge, and he wouldn't know what they were talking about."

Senator Fernald, republican, of Maine, in his speech made earlier in the day, said he spoke against the world court as a plain man and not as a lawyer, and as a plain man he wanted to know what Senator Willis, republican, of Ohio, meant a few days ago when he said that the world court would no more need armies and navies to enforce its decisions than the supreme court of the United States needs them to enforce its decisions. The senator from Maine wondered whether the senator from Ohio had forgotten the Pullman strike in 1894, when President Cleveland sent troops to Chicago to enforce a decree of the supreme court.

Rubini To Play Swan Song Today Will Tour U. S.

Jan Rubini—he of the singing bow and the jaunty baton—today will draw from a wailing violin his Atlanta swan song.

For Mr. Rubini is leaving the Howard theater and the city at the close of the palatial theater's last film "run" tonight. He announced Friday that he has accepted a contract for a tour of the country, and will depart on an early morning train Sunday for Philadelphia, where he will be guest orchestra leader and violin soloist at the Fox theater for some time before his touring contract begins.

Despite this announcement, emotional females who are accustomed to exclaim "oh" when the dapper Rubini swung his bow into position, and "ah" when he bowed his thanks for applause with the grace of a foreign diplomat, probably have no cause to despair—for Maximilian Pilsner is coming to take his place.

Whether Mr. Pilsner—whose name has a distinct foreign flavor—is as jaunty and debonaire as Rubini, is unknown at this time, but he comes here for four weeks as guest conductor with the recommendation of being a noted violinist and former concert master of the New York Philharmonic orchestra. Next week, it is understood, Jake Mathieson, assistant conductor, will wield the Howard baton, to be succeeded for four weeks following by Mr. Pilsner. After that it is expected that a permanent successor to Rubini will have been named.

Mr. Rubini has been in Atlanta for only four months but since coming here has won many friends.

He came to Atlanta four months ago during the musicians' strike and began his first work at the Howard theater with a six-piece jazz band, the first he had ever directed. Soon after the regular orchestra was reinaugurated.

"I am truly sorry that I am leaving Atlanta," Mr. Rubini said Friday. "I have many friends here and I was here just long enough to become attached to Atlanta and its people."

After his engagement at the Fox theater in Philadelphia, Mr. Rubini said he would go to the new Fox theater in New York and then will begin a tour of the country. After completion of his tour, he expects to return to New York and take charge of the orchestra in the Fox theater.

LAUNCH FILIBUSTER IN SENATE TO HALT

and ready to oblige with them at any time.

Tomorrow, Senator Moses is expected to leap into the breach with eight newspaper columns of anti-world court arguments. Other willing performers are standing in the wings awaiting the signal from Stage Manager Borah.

Senator Blease found Washington's farewell address a document so comprehensive that it suggested to him remarks on evolution, cigarette smoking, prohibition, and the social customs of diplomats accredited to Washington.

On evolution the speaker was summary, saying: "I have no sympathy with this theory of evolution, though I may have accumulated doubts as to its falsity since I came to Washington. For, when I see a man—a man so-called—sitting in a restaurant and blowing cigarette smoke in a sweet woman's face, I begin to drift toward evolution as the only possible explanation."

Offers Private Answer.

Senator Neeley, democrat, of West Virginia, interrupted to ask:

"What about the sweet woman whom the senator from South Carolina may have seen blowing cigarette smoke in the so-called man's face? What does the senator think of her?"

Blease replied:

"I don't believe the senator wants an answer to that question—at least not an answer in this chamber. When I see him privately, I will give him the answer."

Takes Slap at Wilson.

Assailing the democratic party for endeavoring to "foist" the League of Nations upon the country, he said he believed this was done "conscientiously for the purpose of endeavoring to make through his egotism, the then president of the United States the president of the world."

In his remarks on prohibition, Blease said:

"The only man in this country that has got prohibition is the man who hasn't got the money to buy liquor. But the diplomats in Washington—

BOYKIN OPENS WAR ON ALLEGED FAKE JEWELRY AUCTIONS

Herman Kimmel, who operates a jewelry auction house at Peachtree street and Auburn avenue, Friday was indicted by Fulton grand jury on two charges of cheating and swindling. Solicitor General John A. Boykin's office announced that other indictments will follow in a campaign against fake jewelry auctioneers.

One of the indictments against Kimmel charged that O. A. Dibble, of 57 South Broad street, had been swindled out of $19.50 because he bought a watch from Kimmel for that amount, with the understanding that it was new, when in reality, it is alleged, the watch was not as represented.

The second charge was that J. B. Long, of 62 Johnson avenue, purchased a diamond ring, which was represented as being worth $30 and as being a perfect stone.

BALMY WEATHER WILL CONTINUE OVER WEEK-END

Balmy weather will continue through the week-end and today will be fair, A. H. Scott, assistant meteorologist of the Atlanta branch of the United States weather bureau, predicted late Friday.

Temperatures Friday ranged from 34 in the early morning to 52 in the afternoon. The thermometer will be slightly higher this morning than on Friday, he said.

The Washington bureau forecast for the state at large was "fair, rising temperature in west portion Saturday; Sunday increasing cloudiness, probably followed by rain."

FRANKLIN PROMOTED BY FAMOUS PLAYERS

J. J. Franklin, district manager for the Famous Players-Lasky corporation, which has controlled the Howard theater for several years, soon will leave Atlanta for New York, it was announced Friday. He will be in charge of the New York state district for Famous Players-Lasky.

Mr. Franklin Friday night was unable to say when he will leave, nor had a successor to the district managership been named.

Charles G. Branham, former manager of the Howard who resigned Thursday, announced Friday that he has formed a connection with Dan Michalove, head of Universal theaters and film exchanges in the south, and will leave to assume a responsible position in Florida in a few days. No successor to Mr. Branham at the Howard has yet been appointed.

HOUSE RATIFIES ITALY'S DEBT PACT

ocrat, who has led the fight for ratification as a member of the debt funding commission, took the floor before voting began and made a final appeal for approval of the Italian pact.

During the debate, nearly every speaker in opposition attacked Mussolini, the Italian premier, and Representative Rainey, Illinois democrat, asked an investigation of fascisti activities in this country, which he detailed in a three-hour speech.

The total debt is $2,042,000,000. Under the settlement, Italy's payments will spread over 62 years, in proportionately the same schedule as with Great Britain, except that during the first five years, payments are to be $5,000,000 annually, without interest. After the first five years, the rate of interest will graduate from one-eighth of one per cent for the first 10 years up to two per cent for the last seven. On an original debt of $1,648,000,000, Italy will pay in 62 years a total of $2,407,000,000.

UPSHAW HITS MUSSOLINI; RAPS DEBT SETTLEMENT.

Washington, January 15.—(Special.)—Opposing the Italian debt settlement, Representative Upshaw, of Georgia, attacked Premier Mussolini in a speech in the house Friday as having dreams of becoming dictator of a new Holy Roman empire, and criticized him especially for his ousting of Masons from the government service.

"No patriotic American, either Catholic or Protestant," Upshaw declared, "believes in such a reign of intolerance as Mussolini presents for our support."

Upshaw said that he would not "willingly surrender 75 cents out of every dollar of American money as a contribution to such Italian dreams and schemes."

"I believe that the great heart of the Italian masses is in the right place and for their sake as well as for the sake of the burdened masses in generous America, I propose to redeem this conviction with my vote."

Upshaw suggested that the Italian debt settlement might have been postponed until the economic situation of that country adjusts itself so that more favorable terms could have been made by the American debt commission.

He said that "if Italy is feeling so depressed that she does not now feel like entering into a better agreement with us, why not leave the matter open a while longer, with present interest accruing?"

Upshaw paid a tribute to Representative Crisp, who is in charge of debt settlements in the house as being "able enough and noble enough to be governor of Georgia, United States senator or even president of the United States," and said he regretted that he had to take issue with his colleague on the Italian debt question.

Dr. Hammond Payne Dies At Residence On Piedmont Road

Dr. Hammond R. Payne, 37, died Friday afternoon at his residence on Piedmont road. He is survived by his widow, two little daughters and a little son; his mother, Mrs. Francis A. Payne; three brothers, James Payne, Walter Payne and George W. Payne, all of Atlanta, and a sister, Miss Mary Payne.

Funeral services will take place at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the chapel of Awtry & Lowndes Co. Dr. Will R. Haughton will officiate.

Dr. Payne had lived in Atlanta practically all his life. His family moved to Atlanta from Rome when he was an infant. He had been a member of the Baptist Tabernacle for many years, and belonged to the State and National Dental association.

REMUS CASE GETS FEDERAL APPEAL

Washington, January 15.—(AP)—The case of George Remus, Cincinnati bootlegger, who served two years in the Atlanta prison and was about to be transferred to the Dayton (Ohio) jail, to serve another sentence, has been appealed to the circuit court of appeals by the government.

The department acted in the light of the supreme court decision in the James Daugherty case from Minnesota, which held that three sentences of five years each in the same case on charges of violating the narcotic laws should run consecutively and not concurrently as claimed by Daugherty.

Lower courts held that Daugherty would have to serve only five years and on the basis of the decision, many prisoners, especially prohibition violators, in a like situation were ready to ask for their release on habeas corpus writs.

The department has acquainted its staff with the decision so that it may meet such moves. In a statement today it was asserted the ruling would be of the utmost importance in enforcing prohibition and narcotic laws.

HELP YOURSELF TO HEALTH
W. K. Kellogg

It was not sleep he needed

BREAKFAST . . . and he was tired, drowsy, lifeless. Why? Eight hours of sleep were surely enough. What ailed him, anyway? What had become of his old-time vigor and zest? Why, he was only a young man. . . .

Yes, and he is only one of a countless number of young men who have grown old and tired long before their time—all because of constipation's vicious poisons. Constipation will dull the keenest mind—blemish and line the fairest skin, cause headaches, and undermine the health of the strongest person. Thank goodness, there is sure, safe, permanent relief from this disease.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is what doctors call a bulk food. As it journeys through the body its fiber remains unchanged. Therefore, it sweeps the intestine clean. ALL-BRAN also absorbs and carries moisture through the intestinal tract, thus stimulating regular, healthy action. ALL-BRAN urges nature to act normally.

Compare this to the forced, gripping action of pills and drugs. How different! Once you fix the amount of ALL-BRAN which you first find effective, you need never increase the portion. Something you could never do with pills and drugs. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is nature's friendly ally.

Eat at least two tablespoonfuls of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN every day—in chronic cases, with every meal. If eaten regularly, it is guaranteed to bring permanent relief or your grocer refunds the purchase price. Its delightful nutty flavor makes it good as a cereal. Serve with milk or cream alone or with fresh or preserved fruit. Sprinkle over other cereals; cook with hot cereals; use in soups, or in the recipes given on every package.

Insist on Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

Only ALL-BRAN brings sure results. Part-bran products are doubtful and sometimes are of no use at all. Why take chances? Doctors recommend ALL-BRAN because they know a 100% bran product brings results.

Kellogg's is the original ALL-BRAN. Ask your grocer for a package this very day. Begin eating it at once. You'll feel better in a week. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is served in leading hotels and restaurants.

KNOW THE TRUTH ABOUT BRAN

To be effective, bran fiber must go through the various digestive processes without submitting to any of them. It must pass through the entire alimentary tract without its form being changed.

What happens when a bran food is eaten?

After the saliva has acted upon it, it passes through the stomach and into the intestines, where every part which is not fiber is absorbed.

In ALL-BRAN the quantity of fiber is so great that it furnishes bulk enough to prevent and relieve constipation.

In a part-bran food, the quantity of fiber is so small that there is only a puny amount to do a herculean task.

ALL-BRAN brings sure results. Demand it.

DEMOCRATIC LEADER WILL ADDRESS BAR

Finis Garrett, Tennessee member of the national house of representatives and democratic floor leader of that body, will be the speaker at the annual banquet of the Atlanta Bar association, it was announced Friday by Marion Smith president. The annual dinner is to be given on the night of March 6.

Judge Shepard Bryan extended the invitation of the bar association to Congressman Garrett on a recent trip to Washington, it was stated, on instructions from the executive committee. Members of the bar association stated Friday that they felt themselves signally fortunate in being able to secure so distinguished a speaker and eminent a lawyer as their guest for the annual banquet.

COUNCILMEN N A B NEGRO TIRE THIEF AFTER SHORT CHASE

Police badges worn by Alderman Guy Dobbs and Councilman W. E. Saunders were used to advantage Friday when a distress call was sounded by Patrolman Gurley, who patrols a beat near city hall.

A negro had stolen a brand-new tire from an automobile parked in front of the Baptist Tabernacle. He was caught in the act and fled. Officer Gurley not being able to overtake him. The two council members got in the automobile of Councilman Saunders and overtook the tire thief at the corner of Spring and Marietta streets. He was taken to police headquarters and will be tried today.

Prominent Woman Had To Abandon Auto in Macon

Athens, Ga., January 15.—(Special.)—Mrs. Madge B. Merritt, home department agent for Glynn county, is attending the six weeks' winter course at the State College of Agriculture.

Mrs. Merritt, upon leaving Brunswick, undertook to make the trip by automobile but she had all sorts of horrible experiences on the road between Brunswick and Macon, and finally had to leave her automobile there and take the train to Athens.

HAVERTY ATTENDS BIG ART EXHIBIT HELD IN HOUSTON

J. J. Haverty, prominent art patron of Atlanta, and one of the city's leading business men, recently attended the exhibition by the Grand Central Art galleries, of New York, held in the Museum of Fine Arts at Houston, Texas.

Mr. Haverty was one of the principal speakers at a banquet to visiting artists and art patrons held on the opening night of the exhibition, and on that occasion carried a message of greeting and goodwill from art lovers in Atlanta to their fellow enthusiasts in Texas.

A movement to secure a permanent art museum for Atlanta has been vigorously sponsored by Mr. Haverty, who is chairman of the art committee of the Chamber of Commerce and a leading member of the Atlanta Art association. He is also regarded as chiefly responsible for the annual exhibition staged here by the Grand Central galleries.

DR. SHIELDS TO SPEAK HERE FEBRUARY 8

Dr. Thomas T. Shields, famous preacher and Bible authority of Toronto, Canada, will speak under auspices of the Atlanta "Billy Sunday" club, at a meeting to be held in the Wesley Memorial auditorium, on the night of February 9, it was announced Friday.

The "Billy Sunday" club accepted an offer to act as host to Dr. Shields during his visit to Atlanta at the weekly luncheon held at the Wesley Memorial church Friday. At that time Dr. Hugh S. Wallace, former Atlantan but now pastor of the First Baptist church of Green Cove Springs, Fla., appeared before the club and suggested that it take charge of the February 9 meeting and the offer was promptly accepted.

Dr. Shields will stop over in Atlanta for this occasion while he is en route to a winter Bible conference to be held in Dr. Wallace's church in Florida.

It also was announced Friday that, if he is in the city on that date, Governor Clifford Walker will introduce Dr. Shields. In the event of the governor's inability to be present, some prominent member of the "Billy Sunday" club will perform the introduction ceremony.

Before leaving Atlanta Friday afternoon for Macon, Dr. Wallace stated that he had extended an invitation to the entire membership of the "Billy Sunday" club to attend the Bible conference at Green Cove Springs, as the guests of his church and city. This will be the only exception, he said, to the rule that only pastors of Baptist churches would be entertained in the hotels and homes of the city. Accommodations are strictly limited, said Dr. Wallace, and not more than 100 or 150 pastors can be accommodated.

"Should the Atlanta club accept the invitation to attend the conference," said Dr. Wallace, "the members can leave Atlanta at night and arrive at Jacksonville next morning. They will be met there and carried to Green Cove Springs, a distance of 30 miles, either by special train or by automobile." Leaving the Florida city the same night, he stated they can eat their breakfast the following morning in Atlanta.

Dr. Wallace was the guest at the club luncheon Friday of M. L. Thrower, prominent local real estate man and an active member of the club. He was accompanied by the Rev. Jacob Gartenhaus, Baptist home board missionary to the Hebrew people. Speaking of the "Billy Sunday" club on Friday afternoon, Dr. Wallace said:

"I know of no body of men in Atlanta better able to entertain a great minister than the 'Billy Sunday' club, and I congratulate both the club and Dr. Shields on this very happy arrangement."

DAYLIGHT BANDIT GETS $10 IN CASH IN BOLD ROBBERY

L. C. Lanier, of 146 McAfee street, was held up and robbed of $10 in cash by an unidentified white bandit Friday morning as he was walking on Pine street near Plum street, according to police.

Mr. Lanier told police that the bandit stopped him and asked for a match. When he looked up after searching for a match he was covered with a pistol in the hands of the stranger.

"The man then told me to turn my back and walk slowly up the street," Mr. Lanier said. "He told me that if I looked around he would blow my brains out," he added.

Miss Ruby McCochran, a teacher in Luckie Street school, reported the theft of a coat from her class room during the recess hour. Call Officers Fred Tippen and Charles Hajos investigated.

A burglar was discovered while robbing Dr. A. L. Curtis' drug store at 259 Peters street, according to Patrolmen Nash and Gamp, who "flushed" the robber. The man fled when he saw the officers approaching. A small quantity of cigars, cigarettes and a small amount of currency was reported missing.

Several suits of clothing was stolen from the store of Sam Friedman, of 156 Peters street, and burglars smashed a window in a cafe at 153 Peters street, but failed to secure any loot.

YORK'S ORDINANCE MAY CAUSE FIGHT ON COUNCIL FLOOR

The ordinance committee Friday adversed an ordinance proposed by Councilman Harry York seeking to prohibit the finance committee or any department head from raising salaries of any city worker, without approval of the mayor and council.

Councilman Horace Russell and Ellis Barrett voted in favor of adversing the measure while Councilman Leo Sudderth, the only other member present, voted for it. A fight on the floor of council is expected Monday over final disposition of the paper.

Face covered with ugly red pimples

Resinol healed the trouble

Valley Centre, Va., Feb. 14:—"Some time ago my face became covered with little pimples which were red and ugly looking. I tried various remedies, but nothing did me any good until I used Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. I applied this treatment about five times every day and in a remarkably short time I was rid of the trouble. There is nothing like the Resinol treatment!" (Signed) Mrs. M. L. Crickenberger.

RULES FOR PAVING BIDS THIS YEAR DECIDED UPON

Advertisement for bids for paving all sidewalks and curbings in Atlanta for 1926 was authorized by the council street committee at its first meeting of the new year Friday afternoon. The recommendation is to go to council Monday and in event of adoption bids must be submitted not later than the hour that council holds its next regular meeting on the first Monday in February.

Specifications for sidewalks include tile and concrete. For curbings, granite and concrete were specified.

Cold weather will tend to defer the start on a big street building program. Many contracts for streets already have been let, but the committee agreed to give contractors until March 1 to start, depending on weather conditions.

Bills were authorized for paving the following streets: Tanner, Hilliard to Yonge; Yonge street, Decatur to Auburn; Stephens street, McDaniel to Humphries; Highland Terrace, Highland avenue to one block west.

Flag Presented Lodge.

A large American flag was presented to Grant Park Rebekah lodge No. 68, I. O. O. F., at its meeting on Monday, January 11, by Mrs. Emma Gibbs, noble grand. Grand Deputy President Minnie Baughn accepted for the lodge.

Permit Granted For Constructing Butterfly Sheds

A building permit, calling for the expenditure of $200,000 for construction of butterfly sheds and a steel concourse in connection with improvements now being made at the Terminal station, was issued Friday by C. J. Bowen, city building inspector.

The work is to be rushed to completion, it was said. The Foundation company is the contractor.

The sheds and concourse will replace the former steel and glass sheds which spanned the track and will provide shelter for each of the landing stations separately.

NEVER AGAIN!

Announcement that the state highway department has authorized the final survey for hard surfacing of the entire highway between Atlanta and Macon will be received with interest and approval. The assurance of Chairman Holder that he expects every inch of this important link of Georgia's "Main Street" to be permanently paved before next winter is more gratifying.

That assurance if fulfilled means that no longer will Georgia be embarrassed by road conditions on the link between two of her principal cities—the most important 100 miles of road in the state, part of which is fit now only for the ancient days of ox cart and mule team transportation.

But the job will only be begun when this project is finished. It will help little during the rains of next winter if thousands who ride in comfort between Atlanta and Macon stick hopelessly in the mud between Macon and the Florida line, or between Atlanta and Tennessee.

The good work must go on!

Never again must Georgia experience a winter highway experience such as she is going through this year.

The first thing the state highway commission should do is to push the construction of a permanently-paved highway all the way from the Tennessee to the Florida lines, and at the same time inaugurate the construction of main-line, east-and-west highways.

Until highways are provided over which visitors to the state can travel in any direction without danger of miring to their hub caps in mud, Georgia will be unworthy of her opportunity.

INEXCUSABLE NEGLECT.

The Cumberland post of the American Legion, of Fayetteville, N. C., has very commendably undertaken to correct an evil that the American government has let go entirely too long. That is, it has demanded of the secretary of war that America's ex-service men who remain in France be given permission to bury their comrades—who die—in this nation's national cemeteries in that country, thereby not only fittingly honoring the veterans who fought the nation's battles, as they are on the home continent, but giving the graves proper care by American guards, and having the same recognized as under the protection of the Stars and Stripes which floats above every American national cemetery in France.

The facts are, when America withdrew her last forces from the continent of Europe she closed the gates to her national cemeteries, although left a suitable cemetery staff at each to keep the graves in good condition, to keep beautiful the greens, and to hoist Old Glory daily above the sleeping heroes of war.

But America also left thousands of living service men in France, many of them in the veterans' bureau hospitals, wounded or gassed, or with pulmonary, or other serious troubles. The veterans' bureau maintains a large personnel in France. Thousands of American boys remained in business in France. Some of them who married are on French farms, and others are in the cities. They are American nationals, veterans of war, ex-members of the expeditionary forces.

If they were in this country and died they would be eligible to burial in any of the national cemeteries. But—while America's national cemeteries in France are large, and there is room sufficient for thousands of graves in the unoccupied spaces—a very inexcusable ruling bars the bodies of ex-service men from them.

Hence, it matters not how brave a boy was, or how many citations for heroism and efficiency in duty he may have received, if he is in France, and dies without sufficient funds for his body to be shipped back to the United States, as an alien he must be buried either in a pauper's field—that is, his body thrown into a trench with others and covered up like a dead horse—or his friends may rent a burial space in a public cemetery for five years only. At the expiration of that time, in order to conserve space, the rent will not be extended but the body will be taken up and dumped into a dead trench, with hundreds of others.

Think of such a fate for the body of an American boy who risked his life, and shortened it, for the flag that refuses to give his body a place beneath its protecting folds.

The North Carolina American Legion post has started something. It deserves the hearty support of every right-thinking American in its demand to have this indifference and neglect immediately remedied. It should be made retroactive.

Scores of bodies of our boys that have thus been temporarily buried in public cemeteries in France, only to be shortly taken up and dumped into a ditch, should be removed to this nation's national cemeteries in that country before that revolting day arrives. And the order should be issued at once that no longer shall an American ex-service man who had been honorably discharged, be barred, upon his death, from resting with his comrades under the flag of his own land.

THE PINE INTERESTS.

There is more constructive activity among the pine products interests than ever before. This is a reflection of the quickening of southern industry all along the line.

The third get-together conference of southern naval stores producers and distributors with the land and timber owners will be held in New Orleans March 1-2-3, 1925.

Carl F. Speh, secretary and manager of the Turpentine and Rosin Producers' association, is chairman of the arrangements committee. Large attendances were had in 1924 and 1925 at the meetings held in Savannah, where the foundations were laid for real cooperation and organized progress by these related interests, but it is confidently expected that the next meeting will have the largest attendance and mark the greatest forward movement of the kind yet witnessed in the south.

It is important that the responsible leaders among the turpentine operators and among the land and timber owners, who have so many vital interests in common, attend this conference and give it the benefit of their experience and practical needs.

Arrangements will be made, it is said, to have several representatives of the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research of the University of Pittsburgh at the conference to explain the great progress that has been made during the past year in developing the greater use of rosin by the large soapmakers, and in what respects turpentine is superior to substitutes.

There will be discussions of these matters and many other vital problems of common interest to southern industry and of national concern.

Those who are interested in pine trees and pine-tree products may profit by attending this conference and participating in its proceedings.

In 1925 we had novels to burn—and coal was mighty short.

The bandits are not even condemned to make out income tax returns.

Another work of the new year is to make the grouch towns get a move on.

Never mind about the broken resolution. Make another, and move on!

Now, let us, with one accord, work to preserve the forests until next Christmas.

It was a tolerably sane Christmast, and so far the new year hasn't made a very red record.

The road hog's resolution is not only to own the middle of the road, but to preempt both sides.

Since the weather man seems snowed under, he'll have to pull the fair-and-warmer stunt in self-defense.

Yes, the Ananias club is still in business; for don't we read of members breaking the ice to take their morning swim?

Since the scientists have discovered that the thermometer in Mars registers 100 below zero, we have about decided that it's a good planet to stay away from.

Just From Georgia

BY FRANK L. STANTON

Crossing the River. (My Ninety-First Birthday.)

I.

I'm growing old—how fast years fly!
Like birds that seek a summer shore;
I also long for one, but I
When I shall go, return no more;
The bird returns, to build a nest,
And sing love songs in praise of May,
But we obeying God's behest,
Return not when we pass away.

II.

Oh, find the shore you long for so,
Is it not nearby where you stand?
It is not near, far must I go;
Not earthly is that heavenly land;
Beyond yon starred sky's golden gleams,
A sea of light it seems to be,
Far, far beyond the reach of dreams,
There is my home—Eternity.

III.

A river too, a placid tide,
Flows past me, where my feet now stand,
Dreaming, I see the other side,
The longed-for shore, the heavenly land;
How beautiful all seems to be,
The stream, the land, the other shore;
Loved ones are waving hands to me,
Who passed away, returned no more.

IV.

Our world is fair, and Love is still
A dear, a holy tie for me,
I break it not, save when God's will Shall call me to Eternity;
I wait upon this earthly shore,
As long as He shall deem it best,
I fear not the "return no more,"
For in God's love secure I rest.

—CHARLES W. HUBNER.

Valuable Lightning.

An exchange said, the other day, that the lightning rod agent had vanished from the rural districts, but the editor of the Adams Eagle notes that one passed through that settlement recently, and following that statement, the Courier had this rhymed skit—

"The mouth is master of the Man,
And I could wish—on land or sea—
Ever from such a mouth to be Extremely free!
The loud guffaw,
The ceaseless jaw,—
Out of all reason and all law,—
The darndest mouth man ever saw,
Or—take my word—
Man ever heard!"

The above is further explained in this local line: "The editor has had three lightning rods put up. It was the only way to get rid of the man who sold 'em."

* * * *

Plain Talk.

In this, from the current Commerce News, Editor Shannon talks plain American—

"If we could not express our own opinions in our own paper, then we'd choke the office devil on printer's ink, kick over the office stove, erect a monument to the printer's towel, lock the door, call the dogs and go rabbit hunting. And we are glad that we do not have to be walking around on stilts for fear that we would tread on somebody's toes or say something that constituted a breach of propriety. In our office, our motto is: 'Give us liberty or give us death.'"

* * * *

The Restless Ones.

Like the songbirds that have been silent so long, the poets are getting restless, but we are with 'em, to a man, in wishing for spring weather, and to hear again the old-time chorus—

"Yonder's Miss Spring
With a rose in her han',
There's another in the garden
For you, Young Man!"

Nuggets by the Wayside.

(Gathered by Carey J. Williams, in the Greensboro Herald-Journal.)

Honest man has been found in Tennessee. Train killed his cow and he said it wasn't a prize-winning thoroughbred.

Another way to lose confidence in your fellowman is to cash checks promiscuously.

The man who prayed for rain several months ago, was cussing like the devil last week because his car was stuck in a mud hole.

They speak of amusement tax, just as if it were possible for taxes to be amusing.

* * * *

"If you have money to burn, pay your subscription, and then the coal man will let us burn it."

"What a pity," says the Albany Herald, "we can't forget the slighting things which other people say about us as easily as a married man forgets to mail his wife's important letter. (Note: All wives' letters are important.)

GEORGIA Day by Day

—BY—
RALPH T. JONES

Glynn county has always been a leader in the campaign for paved roads in Georgia.

Her representative in the legislature, B. F. Mann, has fought a valiant fight to lift Georgia out of the mud.

* * *

Mrs. Merritt, who is home demonstration agent for Glynn, started for Athens to attend the six weeks' winter course at the State College of Agriculture. She decided to travel by automobile.

* * *

From Brunswick to Macon, however, she suffered the transportation agonies that only those who have tried to use Georgia's mudhole highways in wet weather, can appreciate. So she left her car at Macon and finished the trip to Athens by train.

* * *

Judge W. R. Jones, of Meriwether county, member of the legislature of long standing and magnificent service record, was a visitor in Atlanta this week.

Judge Jones mentioned the fact that Meriwether county recently voted favorably on a $300,000 bond issue for building roads. Only 60 votes were cast against it in the entire county.

Not a penny will be spent, said Representative Jones, on anything but permanent roads. For Meriwether has learnt that $10,000 spent on a mile of topsoil, or dirt road, is merely $10,000 thrown into a bottomless mudhole. Sh will use her money at the rate of $25,000 or $30,000 a mile on permanent concrete highways.

That is money invested, paying huge dividends to all citizens.

Another point made by Mr. Jones, however, is of special interest:

Meriwether won't consent, he said, to spending her $300,000 until it is matched, dollar for dollar, by state funds, as promised.

* * *

She is not the only county with the same determination, either. And, unless the state passes a road bond issue herself, it is going to require nothing but a simple mathematical sum to show that some of the counties which have voted to bond themselves, are going to have a weary wait for their roads if they wait for the state to match them, dollar for dollar.

* * *

For the amount of funds for construction which now go to the highway department won't go far towards a complete system of all-paved through highways, if first they have to match every county road bond issue.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

New York, January 15.—On eastern parkway in Brooklyn there are four parallel rows of memorial trees enclosed in grilled squares. On each tree is a small bronze plaque with the name of a soldier, who died in France. Some of the names are not exactly Anglo-Saxon, but that does not diminish their glory.

On decoration day the trees are festooned with flowers and ribbons. But now they are bare and their branches stretch out to the bleak wintry skies in stark nakedness. If your ears are attuned to such things of a spiritual character you can sometimes hear them whisper to each other in the peaceful twilight, sing boisterously at dawn or in the dark night wail their sad lament of sun-forsakeness.

One of those trees has become a sacred shrine to me, a symbol of undying love and overwhelming sadness. I never knew the fellow whose name appears on the plaque, though I might have caught a glimpse of him one day in the hell of the Belleau Woods, for he was a marine. The inscription says so.

On New Year's eve when whistles screamed and horns blew and the city yelled in festive hilarity, I saw her approach the tree. The same girl that was there on the sunny afternoon of decoration day. But now the rain was battering down with merciless and chilling impact. She fastened a ribbon around the wet trunk and leaned her head against the grilled ironwork. Against the light of a swaying street arc, I saw her silhouette shaking in convulsive sobs.

Then she slowly walked away, but had gone no further than ten steps when she looked around, ran back and threw her arms around the ironwork. Once more her head bent low, then she walked away.

I approached the tree in the morning. The ribbon hung limp and wet. It was red silk, color of undying love, and stitched on it in blue, the color of eternal hope were the words: "Shean, Dear Boy!"

These humble things in life have the deepest meaning and are more beautiful than glitter and gold.

The English soldiers play a game called 'Ousie-'ousie in which No. 1 is known as "Kelley's eye;" 99 as "Clickety-click" and 100 as "top o' the 'ouse."

New York dice players use a similar parlance. Two aces for instance are "Chinamen's eyes;" an ace and a deuce is "Little Poison." No. 12 is known as "the grand jury" and means extremely bad luck, the same as hesitating to make your throw which is known as "shaking the coffin" or "the funeral march."

Latest product from Tin Pan alley, contributed by Lew Brown starts out this way: "She's the kind of a girl you like if you like that kind of a girl." It's already supplanting "I miss my Swiss," "Susie" and "C'llegiate on the Bright Trail."

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

Turkish Stage.

The main obstacle to the development of the theatrical art in Turkey has been overcome in the past two years. This was the veto on actresses, parts being taken by Turkish women. Since appearance on the stage involved unveiling, and this was contrary to social rules, the theater had to resort to the expedient of acting Turkish pieces with Armenian actresses. It was under Armenian initiative, with Armenian actors and actresses, that the art developed. The audiences, eager to possess some sort of theater, accustomed themselves to the inevitably imperfect declamation of most of the actors. But this became more and more intolerable as more and more Turks took to acting. The contrast of the pronunciations offended the ear as never before, and now the last justification for hearing with it has disappeared, as Turkish actresses have begun to invade their own stage and displace their Armenian forerunners. The first Turkish woman to appear before the footlights was a Madame Bediar. A company had gone on tour to Smyrna. In this city no Armenians were allowed. Though extremely nervous at having to discard her veil, this Madame Bediar played in the piece. She was acclaimed.

Raising Cain In Volendam.

The burghers of Volendam are heaving sighs of relief. The gendarmerie is catching up on lost sleep, for peace and quiet have returned after weeks of hilarious excitement. Now Volendam is one of the little show places on the Zuyder Zee. They wear the old-fashioned dresses there, and live in the old-fashioned way. Twenty years ago a boy ran away from Volendam. He went to America and became rich. A few months ago he suddenly returned to his native town. He ordered every male inhabitant to the tavern. He threw down 100 florin notes, and all were invited to drink. As days rolled by the "Amerikaan" was surrounded by a bodyguard. They accompanied him on nocturnal jaunts into the jazz palaces of Amsterdam and Rotterdam. They were the gayest band amid the revellers. The bodyguards in their wide pantaloons were in the habit of stealing and concealing square face brandy bottles therein. Though they were discovered, the Amerikaan thought it a good joke, paid for it, but let his guards imagine they got away with it. The town of Volendam rocked with their midnight laughter, newspaper correspondents came to watch operations. Never was such excitement in Volendam. It was decided the guards were to accompany their hero to America. They could not get vises. Then there was wailing and gnashing of teeth, but the pastors solemnly nodded their heads. It would be better so. Quiet has come to Volendam, but there is discontent also, and half the young men have filed application to go to America.

Voices In Germany.

How utterly disappointed the nationalists of Germany are in President Hindenburg may be gleaned from the writings of Dr. Heinrich Pudor, one of the leaders. "In the filthy, suffocating atmosphere of a Hindenburg republic, only lies and misery can survive. With Hindenburg, the choreboy of the Jews, the Slavic slavishness has become natural to us. Ludendorff is pure Teuton. Why have the people not dragged Stresemann off his seat and chased him out of the Brandenburg gate, out of Berlin? It's strange they have not quartered him or made him share the fate of Rathenau." The curious part of such shameless language is not that it is printed freely all over Germany, but that there are so many prominent and wealthy men who are ever ready to help with advice and assistance any of these prospective murderers. The machinery of justice in Germany is plainly in different hands than the administration of government.

Kipling's Ways.

The illness and recovery of Mr. Kipling has caused general attention to be focused on him again, and the consensus of opinion seems to be that Kipling has not lost his power with the public, nor with the editors. Still it's not likely that Mr. Kipling, whom the years have also somewhat mellowed, should have recourse to such practice as one editor recalls. "I recall," this man wrote, "when a colleague accepted Kipling's poem 'Tomlinson.' The poem was approved, but editorial objections were raised to two of the lines. One was struck out, and the editor himself suggested an alternative to the other line. When the proofs were sent to the poet, he wrote against the substituted line: 'This is rotten.' And when he came to the line that was deleted, he wrote: 'I will kill you if you leave this out.' His original version was allowed to stand."

ST. JOHN CHURCH TO INSTALL ORGAN EASTER MORNING

The new organ for St. John Episcopal church, College Park, will be ready for installation by Easter, April 4, and plans for placement of the organ are being made by the church vestry.

Plans for a banquet for men of the parish were made at a recent meeting of the new vestry and Wayne Moore, E. B. Fox and the rector were named as a committee to complete plans. A detailed statement of finances for the past year was given by F. L. Beers, treasurer.

NEW COAST ARTILLERY CHIEF MOVES TO CITY

Colonel Clint C. Hearn arrived in Atlanta Thursday to take command of the coast artillery of the Fourth corps area, with headquarters at Fort McPherson. He relieves Colonel Andrew Hero, Jr., who has been detailed to Washington as chief of C. A. C. of the United States army, made vacant recently by the retirement of General Coe.

Colonel Hearn comes from Harrisburg and has been in charge of artillery units of the Pennsylvania national guard.

RATE EXPERT PRICE NOW GETS $5,400 ANNUAL SALARY

E. M. Price, rate expert for the Georgia public service commission, is now paid a salary of 5,400 per year, it became known Friday. Mr. Price was granted an increase of $400 a year at a meeting held earlier in the week.

This makes Mr. Price one of the highest-salaried employees of the state, not over half a dozen, including the governor, receiving a larger salary than this, it is said.

It was stated at the commission that the increase was voted because of the technical nature of the work and the splendid qualifications of Mr. Price. His salary, incidentally, is higher than that of Chairman Paul H. Trammell, of the commission, who receives $5,000 a year. Other members are paid $3,600 per year, while the secretary draws $3,300.

The governor is paid $7,500, while the attorney general, secretary of state, comptroller general, state school superintendent and commissioner of agriculture are among those who receive $5,000 per year. The state treasurer's salary is $4,800.

NEW FEATURE OFFERED AT FIRST CHRISTIAN

Rev. C. R. Stauffer, minister of the First Christian church, will introduce a "Question and Answer" period in the night service when for a short time each Sunday questions of vital interest to all will be answered. The question Sunday night is one that has been before every Atlantan during the past two weeks on "How to Spend Sunday?"

At the January meeting of the official board, officers for the year were selected as follows: Chairman, John Cooper; vice chairman, Dr. Elzie B. Thomas; secretary, W. T. Jameson; assistant secretary, Virgil G. Chew; clerk of the church, H. D. Bolles; treasurer of general fund, W. F. Mathews; treasurer of missionary fund, S. C. Shelton.

Two new Bible classes have been authorized in the church school, one for women to be taught by the Rev. John Knox and a class for men which will meet in the auditorium and will be taught by the pastor. The new classes will be organized Sunday, January 24.

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

WANTED: MORE HEALTH POLICE.

Statistics indicate no material progress in the prevention of the respiratory infections in the last 30 years. These diseases are responsible for at least three-fourths of all the illness in the community. It is true that whereas there were more than 200 deaths from tuberculosis in each 100,000 population each year 30 years ago, fewer than 100 die now, but it is nevertheless probable that tuberculosis is as widely prevalent now as it has ever been, though with the gradually increasing popular enlightenment the disease is now diagnosed more frequently in the earlier or incipient stage and therefore many more recoveries occur under good medical care. All authorities on tuberculosis agree that our main weapon in the battle against the disease is, after all, teaching the people how to live.

How to live is hygiene. Teaching grownups hygiene is infinitely more difficult than—than just telling folks how to keep well. In fact, after they have passed a certain age—those who survive long enough—it is impossible to teach 'em hygiene. Who was the wisecracker that said something about every man at 40 being his own physician—i. e., a wisenheimer?

So far as the prevention of eradication of disease is concerned, however, we seem to be at a standstill. At present public health administration amounts to no more than a passive toleration of "normal" morbidity and mortality rates for the various diseases which public health administrators constantly term preventable. This passive attitude shows itself in the fondness of public health administrators for the term "control." They prefer to speak of the control of the communicable disease nowadays, and that implies something like the reasonable amount of fleas Mr. Billings thought a dog should have.

Thanks to personal health instruction, and not to any public health service, one of the gravest respiratory infections, diphtheria, may be almost, if not quite eradicated from a given community by an active campaign of personal health education by the family physicians of the community. This has been accomplished within the last year or two by the efforts of the physicians in Auburn, N. Y., a city of 35,000 population, where for eight years up to 1922 there had been an average of nine deaths a year from diphtheria; in March, 1922, the private practitioners of Auburn began their campaign to persuade parents to have the younger children tested for susceptibility to diphtheria (the Schick test) and such children as were found susceptible immunized against the disease (with toxin-antitoxin). In the whole of 1923 and 1924 after this educational work was undertaken by the doctors of Auburn there were only four deaths from diphtheria—three in 1923 and one in 1924, and in the last 20 months there has not been a single death from diphtheria in Auburn.

Of course the New York state health department modestly assumes credit for this Auburn demonstration. "In Auburn, N. Y.," says a newspaper blurb distributed by the New York state health department, "where intensive work has been carried on under the direction of the state department of health." This is humorous. It is like calling the scorekeeper up in the grandstand the director of the ball game. Naturally the passive mood helps the state health department to take unto itself the credit for the work which "has been carried on." Who carried on the work? The private family doctors of Auburn.

The truth is that wherever any headway is gained against the communicable or preventable diseases these days, the intensive work is carried on by the private physician and it is a matter of personal health instruction. Public health authorities may keep score and tell the world they are "directing" the family doctors in the battle, but the family doctor does the work.

What the private practitioners of Auburn have accomplished for the lucky children of that city, through a lot of hard work for which nobody pays and few people ever express thanks, we can do for children throughout the country, if we will. Why not begin now to teach children in school how to live? That's the place to teach physiology, hygiene, health. What a great thing it would be for the future of the country if the little girls in school about the time they put away their dolls were taught the sacred truths of motherhood and the proper care and feeding of infants, and if the boys on the threshold of the cigarette age were taught the plain scientific facts about manhood!

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Cracks Between the Toes.

Recently you published a remedy for cracks between the toes. Will you be good enough to reprint it? (D. J. W.)

Answer.—It was suggested by a correspondent, a rather strong solution of salicylic acid in alcohol, which he said he rubbed on the skin between the toes, daily for a few days. The solution the correspondent sugggested seemed unnecessarily strong, and I think about one dram of salicylic acid in an ounce of alcohol would be strong enough.

Fish and Frogs.

Our biology class would like to know whether fish and frogs purify water when put into a spring? If not, why are they put there? If a person at hard exercise takes off his coat outdoors when he is perspiring will he take cold? (D. M. B.)

Answer.—Fish and frogs do not purify water. There is no reason why they should be put in spring water. But in open pools, ponds, fountains and other small bodies of standing water frogs and minnows eat the larvae of mosquitoes which may otherwise breed in such bodies of water. I do not know what you mean by "cold" in that context, but no illness would occur from such a cause; sudden chilling of the surface or any portion of it, when one is "warmed up" by vigorous exercise is likely to leave soreness, lameness or stiffness in the muscles.

The Boy Grows Up.

About a month ago my husband insisted that our 7-year-old son wear suspenders. I greatly opposed this, as I really don't think a boy under 14 or 15 should wear suspenders similar to the ones the men wear. Is there any danger of suspenders causing the boy's chest to cave in or other injury? (J. J. E.)

Answer.—I congratulate the boy on the good sense of his dad. The caved in chest goes rather with belts. Suspenders are the right thing.

Quarantine.

In health reports I notice tuberculosis no longer leads in the mortality rate. I do not doubt this, but do not think the government is doing all that is possible to prevent tuberculosis. Why quarantine measles and not tuberculosis? If measles is highly contagious, what about tuberculosis? It seems to me a strict quarantine should be required for tuberculosis, and that this would stop the disease from spreading at the rate it is now. (H. Y.)

Answer.—Measles is infectious (not contagious) in the same way that diphtheria, tonsilitis or coryza is. Isolation of the measles patient is necessary for the duration of the stage of invasion—before the eruption appears and not after the eruption is out. (No room to complete this answer.)

My Story of Atlanta

BY SAM W. SMALL

CHAPTER XLII.
The Constitution Launched.

The mother of modern journalism in Atlanta is The Constitution, founded as a new daily on June 16, 1868, as a six-day paper with no Monday edition. At that time Sunday labor was taboo both with proprietors, editors and printers. Now the huge, vaudeville "Sunday paper" is the established piece de resistance of modern American journalism.

The Constitution was founded by Col. Carey W. Styles and his associates in answer to a popular political demand. A strong spirit of resistence to the "reconstruction" policy of the republican party pervaded the home people of Georgia. They had no organ at the state capital and demanded one. Colonel Styles, an ex-Confederate soldier and the possessor of a fiery temper and undauntable courage, undertook to supply that demand. During a visit to Washington city he adopted a suggestion by President Johnson and named the new paper The Constitution, after a pre-war democratic daily of that name that had been published in the national capital.

From its first issue The Constitution caught the welcome and fixed favor of the true people of the state and its political influence rapidly extended into adjacent commonwealths. In that era only men of faith, daring and devotion to the people's most sacred interests could win position and confidence. Such men were they who brought The Constitution into action and the fixed place in public favor that it now enjoys, in its fifty-eighth year, testifies to the continuous public trust that has been given to its conductors by the people of the state and the south.

In all its notable career nothing wise and workable for the welfare of its constituency has failed to get the paper's formidable backing. So sure is popular confidence in its loyalty and integrity that in thousands of homes in Georgia it has been welcomed from its very first issue, and is called "Our Family Bible of Today." That is a unique distinction and an inestimable asset to a great journal.

The names of the managers who engineered the paper through many shoals and storms to its present permanence and prosperity are inseparable from the history of it and of the city. Their roll of honor includes Colonel Styles, the intrepid; J. H. Anderson, the sagacious; Colonel William A. Hemphill, of the steady brain and careful hand; Colonel Edward Y. Clarke, of daring enterprise; Captain Evan P. Howell, the generator and concentrator of journalistic power; Henry W. Grady, the magnetic and scintillant, who captured the immagination and applause of the nation; Roby Robinson, the builder of capital and circulation, and Clark Howell, the trained pilot and wise navigator of a newspaper that has won the incontestable title of "The South's Standard Newspaper."

The roster of the writers who, from time to time, have employed their talents in the columns of The Constitution is a lengthy list of familiar and more or less famous names. Among them was Colonel Isaac W. Avery, a forceful editor, biographer and historian; James R. Barrick, brilliant both in prose and poetry; N. P. T. Finch, a conservative and constructive commentator; Henry W. Grady, the meteor of southern newspaperdom in his era; Joel Chandler Harris, humorist and philosopher, whose fame acquired in the columns of The Constitution, is international and immortal; Wallace Putnam Reed, versatile and vagarious as a comet, and Clark Howell, the steady lightbearer and balance wheel of a modern staff that knows and plays the game of journalism with consumate success.

It cannot be overlooked that in The Constitution staff many "cubs" got their newspaper training who have since become brilliant adjuncts of the great metropolitan journals of America, or graduated into other progressive callings in which they have carved out conspicuous careers. The writer had the rare privilege for fifty years of ever and anon being associated with the men he has named and confesses an inability to do full justice to their consecration and devoted services to Atlanta and her people.

In the field of afternoon journalism the city has two examples of newspaper enterprise and power that stand out ahead of all rivals in the great southeast.

The Atlanta Journal was founded in 1883 by Colonel Edward F. Hoge, an able lawyer and legislator, who called to his staff such capable writers as Wallace Putnam Reed, Smith Clayton and others familiar with city and state newsgathering. The Journal had to endure for several years the usual "rough-sledding" of an Atlanta daily and to fight its way into the confidence and support of a sustaining clientel. Colonel Hoge's ill health caused him to sell the paper, and in 1887 it became the property of a stock company in which such leading citizens as Hoke Smith, Henry H. Cabaniss, Charles A. Collier, Josiah Carter, Henry Jackson, Frank P. Rice and Jacob Haas were stockholders. Those men were known to have the capital and the courage to make the paper a success, and from their acquisition of it dated the advancement of The Journal to its present influence and affluence. The writer, with full knowledge of the field, rates The Journal as the ablest and foremost afternoon newspaper in Dixieland.

The Journal is under the able management of Major John S. Cohen, a native of Augusta, of pioneer Georgia stock, a veteran of the Spanish-American war, and one of the thoroughly-trained journalists of the south. As the outcome of his keen mind and skillful direction the paper has become metropolitan in form and contents, with a circulation larger in figures and wider in area than any other afternoon paper in the southern country.

Among the writers of distinction who contribute to The Journal's popularity are Colonel John T. Boifeuillet, whose pen is facile and whose brain swarms with valuable memories of public men and measures of the last half century; Harry Stillwell Edwards, accomplished author of novels and sketches, but in his newspaper work a humoristic and illuminating commentator, and Fuzzy Woodruff, whose dramatic and sporting articles are the tempting meat of The Journal's widespread clientele.

The competitor in the afternoon field is The Atlanta Georgian, with its Sunday American edition. The Georgian was created by the Hearst corporation, and is one of a platoon of daily papers deployed across the continent from Boston to the Pacific coast. It carries all the insignia of "the Hearst string" and yet is distinguished by Georgia tang which marks it as a real home institution, rather than an alien adventurer. That Georgian flavor which entitles it to its name is due almost entirely to the clear knowledge of Georgia people and affairs possessed by James B. Nevin. He is Georgia bred and trained in journalism, and the local craft has registered no one with a keener wit and a saner philosophy than Mr. Nevin. His "Caught in the Current" column is one of the most eagerly read and appreciated features of the paper.

The daily journalism of Atlanta measures fully up to the spirit and metropolitanism of the city.

GORDON ST. CHURCH TO HOLD ARCADE SERVICES SUNDAY

The Evangelical Ministers' association and the Business Men's Evangelistic club will hold an evangelistic service Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Peachtree Arcade.

This meeting will be under the auspices of the Gordon Street Baptist church. The Rev. W. H. Faust, D. D., pastor, will speak on "Christ's Steward." One of the features will be the music rendered by the 20-piece orchestra of the Bible school of the church and the Landers' quartet. Miss Mamie Florence, soloist of the church, will render a special selection. The music will be in charge of Clark Landers, chorister of the church, supported by a large chorus choir.

Fire Damage Believed Caused by Burglars Who Ransacked House

Burglars who entered the residence of C. E. Miller, 132 Linwood avenue, early Friday morning are believed to have started a fire which badly damaged the dwelling and threatened several homes in the vicinity.

The family had been out of town for some time and the house was unoccupied. Mrs. L. M. Christian, Jr., a neighbor, was awakened about 4:30 o'clock and discovered the flames. Firemen were summoned and succeeded in extinguishing the flames. A section in the rear of the residence was badly burned.

A trunk was found which appeared to have been ransacked, and this clue led to the belief that burglars had robbed the residence and dropped a lighted match.

PLAYCRAFTERS OFFER ONE-ACT PLAY TONIGHT

The Playcrafters, local "little theater" group, will give the second performance of a trio of one-act plays at their theater on Gordon street at 8 o'clock tonight.

Plays to be given are Arnold Bennett's "The Stepmother;" Lord Dunsany's "The Golden Door," and an original play by Charles Willis, "The Star."

All plays are open to the general public and no admission is charged.

HOLDER WILL RETURN TO ATLANTA MONDAY

Chairman John N. Holder, of the state highway board, is expected to return to Atlanta Monday, after spending the past week in attendance upon the Chicago road show, a national exhibition of road building developments.

Chairman Holder on Friday wired his secretary that he would leave Chicago on the return trip Saturday morning.

NEW TRIAL ASKED FOR LEON NICHOLS

Leon Nichols, convicted on charges of voluntary manslaughter in connection with the fatal shooting of Mann McIntyre on Ivy street on July 20, 1924, and sentenced to serve 10 to 15 years, Friday filed an appeal for a new trial.

Nichols declared that he fired the death shot in defense of his own life. His attorney, H. A. Allen, filed the new trial motion. It will be heard February 13.

HARTSFIELD SEEKS AVIATION RESERVE FLEET FOR CITY

Alderman W. B. Hartsfield, chairman of the municipal aviation board, announced Friday plans for bringing to Candler field, Atlanta's aviation site, nine airplane to form the nucleus of an aviation reserve squadron.

United States Senator Walter George had pledged his utmost cooperation in the new move, according to Mr. Hartsfield.

Atlanta's air field now is in shape to permit the landing of any planes, and a great many are landing there daily for refueling, Mr. Hartsfield said.

Preventive Clinic Active During 1925, Annual Report Shows

A year of unusual activities in the preventative clinic of the city health department was revealed in the annual report Friday of Dr. Lee Bivings, physician in charge.

More than 10,000 injections were given for preventative contagious diseases, his report showed. Of these, 300 were given to prevent diphtheria; 40 doses of diphtheria anti-toxin for temporary immunity from that disease; 120 doses of scarlet fever serum; 200 doses of smallpox serum, and 9,600 injections of typhoid fever serum.

Youthful Memory Expert Entertains Atlanta Civitans

J. C. Gavan, of the Lions' club and Kenneth Crabb, 12-year-old memory expert, entertained members of the Civitan club Friday at the noon luncheon at the Ansley hotel with a memory test. No business matters were discussed at the meeting and the entire hour was spent in the test.

Discovery of Senefru Tomb Vastly More Important Than Finding of Tut Mummy

(Copyright, 1926, by The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance. All Rights Reserved.)

(This is the fourth of a series of articles by John L. Balderston, special correspondent of The Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance, who was sent to Egypt to penetrate the veil of censorship which has obscured the recent developments of archeological research in that country. It is expected that the most important discovery in the history of modern Egypt will be announced within a few days from Egypt. Mr. Balderston, on his return to London, has cabled full details of this pending announcement.)

London, January 15.—What is likely to be found inside the Senefru tomb which has been discovered by the Harvard expedition in Egypt?

The question opens up a wide range of conjecture. When Carter and Carnarvon found Tutankhamen, they knew pretty well what the burial chamber would contain. Fragments had been found of the funerar equipment of several eighteenth dynasty Pharaohs, manuscripts exist describing the examination of robbers caught rifling the tombs of the Theban kings. There was nothing therefore surprising in the gold shrines, the coffins within the coffins.

But nothing whatever is known about the royal burial customs in the days of the greatest Egyptian Pharaohs, the pyramid kings, of whom Senefru was one. This alone makes the Harvard-Boston discovery of vastly more scientific and historical importance than that of Tutankhamen, even if the treasures be less in bulk. Inferences can be drawn from the known tombs of the nobility of Senefru's days, though all of them were plundered in ancient times. A few inscriptions from the so-called pyramid texts, engraved not in the great pyramids but in the later ones of the fifth dynasty, give some hints.

Saw Sealed Door.

From the hole in the corner of the tomb, Rowe and Greenlees saw a sealed door, they saw the gold canopy over the alabaster sarcophagus, they saw the debris of furniture covering many objects on the floor. Beyond this, all is guess work. But the Egyptologists are able to make pretty shrewd guesses, some of which will probably turn out to be right.

In the first place, the mummy of Senefru will not be found, because he lived before the art of embalming had been discovered.

Crude attempts to preserve the body were made, but they are not likely to have been successful. A skeleton wrapped in a bull's hide probably lies inside the sarcophagus. There was an old tradition that the early kings were buried in the hides of sacred bulls, and the finding of a bull's head in a niche in the burial shaft lends plausibility to this theory.

No Statue Seen.

There is no statue in evidence in the sepulchral chamber itself. But, behind the sealed door, the excavators confidently hope, for the reasons stated, to find a statue of the king. If they do, it will of course be the work of Senefru's greatest sculptor, and it is not a mere shot in the dark to suggest that it will take rank at once as one of the masterpieces of the world for its artistic excellence, as well as its priceless historic value. The contemporary wooden statue of an Egyptian middle class official, called the Sheikh el-Beled, and the famous limestone statues of Prince Rahotep and his wife, Nofret, the latter from the tombs of Senefru's family and relatives near his Meidum pyramid, have never been excelled by any sculptor since, and many art critics argue that they have never been equalled. They are in the Cairo museum.

No Guess Possible.

No intelligent speculation is possible concerning what Cheops buried with Senefru. The crown of upper and lower Egypt, priceless jewels, anything may be inside the alabaster coffin. It will surprise Egyptologists greatly if the unopened tomb of one of the greatest Pharaohs of history, whose power and resources were greater than those of the mightiest Theban kings of the empire, and who clearly devoted the labors of scores of thousands of his subjects for many years to his glorification in the after life, does not contain astonishing treasures.

Who was this Senefru? Even though he lived from 2600 to 1600 years before Tutankhamen, according to the rival estimates of Professor Flinders Petrie and Dr. George A. Reisner, much more is known about him than about the boy Pharaoh. The comparison between the two monarchs is inevitable, for no untouched royal burial had ever been found in Egypt until the Luxor tomb was opened, and now three years later it seems that a second Pharaoh has been unearthed, surrounded by his treasures as the priests of Cheops left him.

The boy king, Tut, left no mark in history. He reigned seven or eight years in a troubled period, and he had not been dead 20 years before his successor, Horemheb removed Tut's name from the monuments and added the years of his reign to his own. So that a century after Tut was dead, only antiquarian priests knew that he had ever existed, a fact which probably explains why his tomb was not rifled in subsequent troubled times. For Tut's tomb was hidden no more skillfully than those of the great conquerors of the Theban empire, all of those shrines had been gutted before Greek and Roman tourists came to the Valley of the Kings and scrawled their names on the walls of the sepulchers of the Pharaohs.

Senefru, even though his exact date cannot yet be fixed within 900 years, left a name in Egypt that was remembered and reverenced for scores of centuries. He was probably the most powerful monarch who had existed in the world, up to his time. That he was able to plan and partly construct a pyramid nearly as big as that of Cheops near Dahshur, later change his mind and build his "false pyramid" at Meidum, and after this conceivably commence a third time or at least choose the site of the great pyramid of Cheops, indicates a Pharaoh towering above his predecessors.

History Uncertain.

It is not known whether Senefru was the father of Cheops. Manetho, the ancient historian who left a list of the Pharaohs, placed Senefru as the last king of the Third Dynasty and Cheops as the first monarch of the fourth. Most modern scholars doubt this, and believe that it was Senefru who founded the greatest of all the dynasties. The contents of the tomb should settle the controversy.

There is only one known link between Senefru and his immediate successors. A sepulchral stele has been found from the tomb of Queen Meritiotis, who is described as the chief wife of Senefru, and as having married Cheops when Senefru died. She survived her second husband, and is mentioned as "having been honored in the presence of King Chephren," the builder of the Second Pyramid at Giza, when she must have been 80 years old. Were the site of her tomb not known, a plausible case could be made out that the new Harvard-Boston tomb, with its Senefru gold canopy and its sealed shaft whose blocks bear the quarry marks of Cheops, might be the tomb not of Senefru, but of Meritiotis.

SPEEDY PROGRESS MADE ON TAX BILL

Washington, January 15.—(AP)—Working at full speed, the senate finance committee brought its work on the house tax reduction bill up to a point today which will permit final action tomorrow.

Chairman Smoot ordered several approved sections of the bill sent to the printers and announced he would attempt to have the measure presented to the senate by Wednesday and taken up on the floor a day or two later.

Leaders of both parties have given assurance that the measure will be given right of way in the senate, and have announced they will press for early action to assure tax reduction by March 15, when first income tax installments are due.

Passing over the inheritance and gift taxes, the only remaining rate schedules to be considered, the committee disposed of a number of technical phases of the measure today.

Provisions of the house bill continuing the board of tax appeals with a membership of 10 members, with increased salaries, was approved, but it was decided to limit the appointments to 10 years instead of 14.

Terms of the house bill requiring that appeals be filed with the board were amended to give taxpayers the alternative of filing with the board or a court. A motion to extend jurisdiction of the board to cases under the 1913 act was rejected.

The committee agreed to an amendment assuring exemption of income on profits of cooperative marketing associations, when 85 per cent of their business is transacted on behalf of members. It refused, however, to allow exemptions for cooperative apartment house organizations.

COUNTESS AT HOME OF BIG FLOUR MAN, BUT STAYS SILENT

West Palm Beach, Fla., January 15.—Countess Salm Von Hoogstraeten is at the home of John Sargent Pillsbury, the Minneapolis flour king, and is as secluded and silent as ever, it became known here Friday.

Her removal from "Waikiki" cottage to Pillsbury's home, a secluded place in the outskirts of Palm Beach, is believed to be a preparatory move to her departure for New York within a few days.

The party which she was reported to be planning to give Thursday night, went off as scheduled at the Montmartre club, but details of the affair were kept secret. Many persons socially prominent in New York and Philadelphia were at the affair, it was reported.

GOUCHER COLLEGE GIRLS FORBIDDEN CHARLESTON, RADIO

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Baltimore, Md., January 15.—It was the turn of the Charleston today to be visited with the wrath of Goucher college authorities, who yesterday forbade the radio as a dissipation, and who within the last month have placed a ban on bare knees, rolled stockings, cigarettes and gum-chewing.

Miss Elizabeth Mason, hall mistress of Midgard hall, started the agitation against the Charleston. She did it, she said, because 25 girls at the hall jarred the plaster from the ceiling and made pictures tumble.

The ban is particularly hard on the Goucher girls, many of them from New York and Long Island, because the Charleston had become a virile epidemic.

STAGE SET TO DEPOSE KING OF RUMANIA

the Bratiano brothers, who incline toward a dictatorship idea as the elections draw near, and who are strongly backed by Queen Marie.

The growing strength of the peasant party is threatening to develop. The crown prince's absence complicates the situation seriously.

Regime Split Three Ways.

The present regime is split three ways on the question of succession. One faction favors a regency, another insists King Ferdinand is not too old and feeble, and can continue to reign, and a third, which is small, backs Carol and wants him to return.

His 7-year-old son by his morganatic marriage with Mme. Zizi Lambrino is beginning to be considered as still another pawn in the game. Mme. Zizi's boy, who is also named Carol, claims the blood of the old Moldavian Soutzo dukes, the greatest family in Rumania before the German dynasty from which Mme. Lambrino descended.

The government has allowed Mme. Zizi and her son three months to clean up their affairs and leave the country. The former crown prince and his former morganatic wife, who are reported to be plentifully supplied with money, must live abroad. Before he left Bucharest, Prince Carol liquidated a number of his estates through his agents, depositing the proceeds in foreign banks, so that he can be independent of his royal allowance.

DEMONSTRATIONS HELD IN RUMANIA FOR CAROL.

Vienna, January 15.—(Ullstein Press Service.)—Reports from the Bulgarian border state that countless demonstrations are being held in Rumania in favor of Prince Carol. The government has dismissed 38 generals for participating in this sympathetic movement.

home distilleries in France contribute to the intoxication of that nation. With bread lines, unemployment doles, debt-dodging and hands outstretched for American loans, the wet nations of Europe may profit by America's example of new freedom from alcohol's rule."

The anniversary also was made the occasion for a petition from 70 women throughout the country, asking that "prohibition be put in the hands of its friends." The petition was addressed to President Coolidge and members of the cabinet and congress.

Want Merit System.

Cooperation in bringing about the strictest enforcement of prohibition was pledged by the women, who added:

"We commend every effort you may make to remove prohibition from politics by placing the service under the merit system."

They said that all great reforms had required a generation or two to become fully effective, and that prohibition now was in a formative stage.

Among the signers were Jane Addams, Mrs. Ella Boole, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, Mrs. Raymond Robins, Mrs. John D. Sherman, Mrs. Frank Vanderlip, Miss Catherine Waugh McCullough and Miss Mary Garrett Hay.

Irving and Ellin, in London, Insist Marriage Like Dream

:: NO RADIO BLESSING YET FROM "FATHER" MACKAY ::

London, January 15.—(By United News.)—Irving and Ellin Berlin have arrived—Ellin nervous and tired, and Irving very much the attentive lover.

Clarence H. Mackay, head of the Postal Telegraph company and the bride's angry father, did not send any radio blessings to his daughter and son-in-law while they were steaming across the Atlantic aboard the Leviathan.

"We can't think of anything more to say except that our honeymoon has been very happy; we have found marriage like a dream," Irving said on stepping from the boat train at Waterloo station, where he was greeted by friends.

"Can't you ask people to let us alone for awhile," Mrs. Berlin plaintively inquired. "It is our honeymoon, not theirs."

As America's foremost honeymooners stepped down at Waterloo, they found London in the grip of the coldest day in five years. Londoners were freezing, but Berlin was too concerned with his wife to observe the weather. Oblivious to the overcoat which hung across his arm, he attentively took Ellin from the train. They walked to an automobile, arm in arm, and rode to their hotel.

Friday night the Berlins dined at their hotel, where they left orders that they were not to be disturbed. While in London they will go sightseeing and attend theaters and cabarets.

The pair's five day crossing, according to reports of friends aboard the liner, was a blissful affair, not complicated by high seas, and free of the tumult which marred their happiness in New York. For two days they kept strictly to their rooms, where their meals were served. Ellin was clearly unnerved by their riotous departure and her break with her father.

On the third day they braved the curiosity of the passengers dining in the ship's restaurant, and on the fourth day they appeared to see the entertainment in the main salon. The orchestra, with great grins, launched Irving's famous song, "All Alone," which curious selection brought a polite bow of acknowledgement from Mr. Berlin.

A new departure—ocean censorship—was an interesting development of this honeymoon trip. Captain Hartley is understood to have flatly refused to permit a reporter for a certain service, who boarded the ship at New York, to wireless daily messages on the Berlins' doings, as he intended.

CLEMENCY IS REFUSED TO JONES, BLOODWORTH

office before the final hearing began there at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

Governor Walker granted a two-hour hearing on the case, during which Mr. Beeland had the opening and closing arguments and at which the case for the prosecution was represented by George Palmer, prominent Columbus attorney, and Walker Flournoy, solicitor of the Muscogee circuit.

In addition to the attorneys, the mother of Willie Jones, Mrs. J. M. Jones, was present at both hearings. She was accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Sartain, and by Mrs. M. A. Walker, who works for prisoners in jails and penitentiaries. Sikes Underwood, brother of Howard Underwood, victim of the Jones-Bloodworth crime, was also present. He was accompanied by two friends, Jake Bryant and Dave Castelove.

Plea of Attorney.

Attorney Beeland, in his arguments before both the governor and the prison commission, referred to the fact that the supreme court had granted his clients a second trial on the ground that one of the jurors at the first trial was disqualified by relation to Underwood, the slain man. He argued that a juror at the second trial was just as much disqualified, because he had been heard to say earlier in the case that the two youths should hang provided "newspaper accounts of the case are true."

Mr. Beeland admitted that the trial judge had passed on the qualification of this juror, and that the supreme court had passed upon the legality of the judge's action, but he contended that the question in the case was not one of the guilt, pure and simple, but rather of the degree of punishment, and that this statement by a juror, precluded possibility of his standing for any other verdict than that of death.

Mr. Beeland said his clients admitted their guilt of the murder, but he urged that at the time they were only 18 and 19 years of age respectively, and had had no schooling or religious training. "They should be objects of pity rather than as hardened criminals," he declared.

Closing his argument, Mr. Beeland referred to the fact that he had been appointed to defend the youths by the court, their families not having funds to employ a lawyer. He said he had fought for them for over two years, and now passed that duty on to the shoulders of the governor.

Destroys Road's Hospitality.

Attorney Palmer, appearing for the state, referred to the crime and others as having destroyed the spirit of hospitality on the roads which had previously been universal in the south. He told how Jones and Bloodworth had slain Underwood, a traveling salesman, after he had given them a lift in his automobile, and cited other recent cases of similar type as reasons why he and other motorists had adopted the habit of refusing to accommodate any pedestrians on the roads that they did not know.

Solicitor Flournoy did not speak long, referring to the previous hearing before the governor, when the youths were expected to hang after their first trial. At that time they were saved from the gallows at the last minute by an injunction granted on the ground that the gallows at the Butler jail was not sufficiently screened from public view to comply with the Georgia law.

Solicitor Flournoy, however, recalled that earlier in the case the defense had advanced as a plea for mercy on the argument that the youths were drunk at the time of the murder, and that it was not premeditated. He said that, anticipating a repetition of such arguments, he had brought proof that they were sober, and that they had stopped other motorists on the day of the crime and had told several people that they were going to get money that day, in at least one case, adding, "If we have to murder somebody for it."

Just as the hearing closed, Mrs. Jones, mother of one of the condemned youths, rose suddenly to her feet and appealed to the governor for mercy for her boy. She declared that he was not older than the defense had said, and attempted to explain bloodstains found on his clothing after he was arrested by saying that a brother had killed some hogs the same day.

Only Woman's Plea.

This was the only voice raised by any of the women at the hearing. For most of the time they sat with bowed heads, handkerchiefs pressed tightly to their trembling lips. At one time, Mrs. Sartain, aunt of the Jones boy, sat with eyes brooding on some far-off thought while her fingers twisted a crumpled handkerchief. From time to time Mrs. Jones straightened the folds of her dress, as she sat in the shadows at the rear of the governor's office, but that was her only movement.

FURMAN WINS DECISION IN DEBATE AT EMORY

Emory University, Ga., January 15. (Special.)—Although the world court may face a filibuster in congress at Washington, it won a unanimous decision here tonight when representatives from Furman university were awarded a unanimous decision in the debate with Emory students on the subject, "Resolved that the United States should enter the world court." Furman championed the affirmative and Emory the negative.

Raymone Barnes and Lewis H. Fowler represented Furman and C. W. Allen, of Calhoun, and J. H. Therrell, of Atlanta, spoke for Emory. Professor N. A. Goodyear presided and the judges were, Colonel Reuben R. Arnold, T. B. Everett and Dr. Witherspoon Dodge, all of Atlanta.

The Furman men based their argument on three main points, that the world court was created as a direct result of the peace moves of America; that the court is the most feasible plan yet devised to settle international disputes and that mutual benefit would result to the world and to the United States by its entry into the court.

The negative speakers based their argument upon the statements that the world court is totally inadequate to settle international disputes; is positively ineffective and fundamentally unsound.

While Charles Evans Hughes and former President Taft were often quoted, a remarkable feature of the debate was that the name of Woodrow Wilson was not mentioned by either speaker.

DECISION NO SURPRISE TO DOOMED MEN.

Columbus, Ga., January 15.—(AP) Willie Jones and Gervis Bloodworth were calm as they were told by an Enquirer-Sun reporter tonight that Governor Walker had refused to save their lives. Jones, the younger, who was standing in the cell, as they were informed of the decision of the chief executive, was the first to speak.

"I am no surprised," he stated, and added that he had heard "no" so much that "it doesn't worry me a bit."

Bloodworth, seated on the bunk, then said that the could have announced the governor's decision before he did. The boys apparently had not expected favorable action from the governor.

Jones said that he "is not studying about it," and that "if they don't want me to have life, it is perfectly all right." He asserted "that they can't take the life that is to come," and added that "I am getting anxious myself to be with Jesus."

"There is a life beyond the grave," said Jones, "much better than this world can ever afford."

Bloodworth said he felt the same way about it.

It was not death that he dreaded, Jones said, but explained that he wanted to live so that he could render service in uplifting and upbuilding "God's kingdom." In connection with previous appeals Jones had pleaded that he wanted to live so that he would serve the Lord. He said tonight, however, that if he is not allowed to live, God will not hold him responsible.

"The Apostle Paul said he could see his way clear," continued Jones, "and I can see my way clear. There is nothing between me and God."

Both condemned boys are "ready to go," according to their statements tonight. Both mentioned the hardship upon their mothers, but Bloodworth seemed cheered when he made the statement that he thought that his mother had realized "that there ain't much to worry about."

The boys are under sentence to die on the gallows here two weeks from today for the murder of Howard F. Underwood in Taylor county in 1923.

GRAND JURY INDICTS REV. O. H. GREENWELL

The grand jury Friday returned an indictment charging larceny after trust against the Rev. O. H. Greenwell, of Sanford, Fla. L. A. Chamblee, of Hartwell, was complainant in the case, alleging that on October 1, 1923, he entrusted to Greenwell $25 to be applied for use of the complainant. The indictment charges that Greenwell appropriated the money to his own benefit and converted it to his own use.

Better Than Whiskey For Colds and Flu

The sensation of the drug trade is Aspironal, the two-minute cold and cough reliever, authoritatively guaranteed by the laboratories; tested, approved and most enthusiastically endorsed by the highest authorities, and proclaimed by the people as ten times as quick and effective as whiskey, rock and rye, or any other cold and cough remedy they have ever tried.

All drug stores are supplied with the wonderful elixir, so all you have to do is to step into the nearest drug store, hand the clerk half a dollar for a bottle of Aspironal and tell him to serve you two teaspoonfuls. With your watch in your hand, take the drink at one swallow and call for your money back in two minutes if you cannot feel the distressing symptoms of your cold fading away like a dream, within the time limit. Don't be bashful, for all druggists invite you and expect you to try it. Everybody's doing it.

Take the remainder of the bottle home to your wife and children, for Aspironal is by far the safest and most effective, the easiest to take and the most agreeable cold and cough remedy for children as well as adults. Quickest relief for catarrhal croup and children's choking up at night.—(adv.)

21 MEN TRAPPED IN MINE RELEASED

Fairmont, W. Va., January 15.—(AP) All the miners, 40 in number, who entered the No. 8 mine of the Jamison Coal and Coke company last night before it was partially wrecked by an explosion were accounted for tonight.

Twenty-one late today walked forth from the "valley of the shadow of death," after having been entombed for more than 18 hours, and 19 bodies were removed from the pit at intervals following the blast.

Up until tonight it had been thought that only 38 men were in the mine, but the list of dead and living revealed that two additional men were included in the shift.

OKLAHOMA MINE TOLL IS INCREASED TO 93

Wilburton, Okla., January 15.—(AP) The death list in the explosion Wednesday at the Degnan-McConnell mine tonight apparently had been increased to 93. Relief workers late today said they had located five bodies, when only three previously had been thought unrecovered. All five were negroes.

Forty-five convicts at the Oklahoma penitentiary at McAlester, nearby, today prepared most of the graves for the victims, and tonight a long row of 50 ranged side by side in a little country cemetery in a valley near the mine.

The mine was virtually deserted today, but the streets of the town were filled with people.

A few funerals were held late today, but most of them will be held tomorrow. Because of the inability of local ministers to meet the demands of separate services, plans for a joint service for a number of the victims were discussed, but no definite decision was announced.

WORLD PEACE PLEA BY STATE LEGION HEAD

Rome, Ga., January 15.—(AP)—A plea for world peace "through the League of Nations or whatever you may call it" was made here last night by Colonel Homer Watkins, commander of the Georgia department of the American Legion, in an address to the Shanklin Attaway post.

"Old men vote war but the young men fight it," said Commander Watkins. "Civilization must find a way to stamp out war or war will stamp out civilization. Scientists have been centuries studying how to prolong life while other scientists have been trying to discover a way to destroy the human race. Civilization could not withstand another war like that of 1914-18."

Commander Watkins urged adequate care of disabled veterans, enrollment of 10,000 members in the legion in Georgia and participation in all civic activities.

William Howard Lewis was installed as the new commander of the local post. He announced the objectives for this year will be completion of a memorial fund, operation of the fair and memorial park and establishment of an amateur baseball city league.

JUDGE ADVOCATES "DUCKING STOOL" TO STOP GOSSIP

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

San Francisco, Calif., January 15.—Duck gossips!

That is what Judge Thomas F. Garaham suggested here to stop the divorce evil.

"Bring back the ducking stool for gossips," said his honor, "and you will make a big cut in divorces. Back of most of these divorce complaints is gossip."

"Ye Duckynge stoole" formed part of the ancient legal machinery of England. It was brought over with the pilgrims and used in New England for a time. But it went out of fashion more than 100 years ago, and the last recorded punishment with it was at Leominster, England, in 1809. After that time, they kept sentencing folks to be ducked until 1817, but none of the sentences was executed.

With the prisoner strapped at the end of the plank, the merry villagers raised the land end of the see-saw and plunged the prisoner under water as many times as was esteemed mete.

FALSE TEETH LOST IN SEA FOR YEAR FOUND ON BEACH

St. Petersburg, Fla., January 15.—(AP)—About a year ago George H. York, winter visitor here from Battle Creek, lost his false teeth in the Gulf of Mexico when seized with an attack of seasickness while fishing. A few days ago Frank E. Halliday, a friend of York, went shell hunting on the beach at Indian Rocks, near here, with his wife. Espying a cluster of shells he pawed them over, and found a set of false teeth glistening with brine, and undamaged.

Halliday remembered York's misfortune and took his find to his friend, who identified them as the set he had lost. The spot where the teeth were found is several miles from where they were lost.

Coolidge Assumes 'Hands Off' Policy In Coal Situation

Washington, January 15.—(AP)—With members of congress continuing today to interest themselves in the anthracite situation, the white house made it clear that President Coolidge proposes to maintain his hands-off policy.

While the president's position was being restated officially, Senator Copeland, democrat, New York, offered a resolution requesting the president to act, and gave notice that he would call the measure up tomorrow with a view to obtaining "early action."

At the white house it was explained that the president considered the federal government powerless to help on the situation, at least until congress enacts legislation empowering it to act in industrial disputes.

Before Senator Copeland offered his proposal five republican representatives from Pennsylvania anthracite districts held a conference with Secretary Davis at the labor department, but did not ask any specific governmental action. They said they had no plan of dealing with the suspension to suggest and that they doubted the efficacy of any federal interference.

Not only is President Coolidge convinced that nothing can be done by a federal agency, but he feels that substantial progress cannot be made toward working out a permanent plan for solution of labor disputes in the mining industry with a controversy existing in the anthracite field.

As for a coal supply, Mr. Coolidge also contemplates no government action toward insuring fuel. The situation is satisfactory in all sections, even in New England, and the normally anthracite-consuming territory, he has been informed, and, although there is a shortage of coal, there are plenty of satisfactory substitutes.

ADJUTANT GENERAL OF SOUTH CAROLINA FOUND DEAD IN BED

St. Augustine, Fla., January 15.—(AP)—A shadow was cast today over the national guard convention in session here through the death of Brigadier General Robert Craig, adjutant general of South Carolina, who was found dead in his room at a local hotel shortly after noon. General Craig attended the military ball last night, and was evidently in the best of health and spirits.

Although he did not appear at the convention this morning, his absence was not surprising, as it was thought he was probably sleeping late. However, when he did not come down to luncheon the door of his hotel room was forced open and the body found on the floor near the bed, fully clothed, except for the coat which had been removed.

Death was pronounced due to heart failure or apoplexy.

CHEMICAL COMPANY MORTGAGE ORDERED CLOSED BY COURT

Cincinnati, January 15.—(AP)—United States District Judge Smith Hickenlooper today granted the Union Trust Company of New York an ancillary decree for foreclosure of a $25,000,000 mortgage on the Cincinnati property of the Virginia-Caroline Chemical company, of Richmond, Va. This decree approves a similar one issued by the district court of Newark, N. J., where the chemical company's home offices are located.

COOLIDGE UPHOLDS PERSHING'S AWARD

Washington, January 15.—(AP)—The interpretation placed on the Tacna-Arica arbitral award by General Pershing was sustained by President Coolidge tonight in his decision in the Chilean appeal from actions of the plebiscitary commission, over which he presided.

The president reiterated that Chilean sovereignty was not involved in the interpretation of the award, and emphasized that both Chile and Peru had pledged themselves to use their resources and authority to bring about a fair plebiscite.

The actions of the commission, from which Chile appealed to President Coolidge as arbitrator December 9, had to do with the determination of dates and preparations for the voting which, under his award, is to determine the sovereignty of the two provinces, long in dispute between the two nations.

The general's stand that the award gave the commission "all authority necessary for the determination of the prerequisites of a fair plebiscite" was sustained by the president. The decision stated that Chile and Peru were bound by their pledge to give assistance in every way to the commission, and upheld its application of the award to continue which it justly had a right to evaluate.

The decision was handed to the Chilean and Peruvian diplomatic representatives here and was cabled to General Pershing at Arica, where the commission is sitting.

Postal Salaries Act Questioned By Sen. George

Washington, January 15.—(AP)—Senator George, democrat, Georgia, has taken issue with Comptroller General McCarl on his interpretation of the postal salaries act under which he is consolidating rural routes.

The Georgia senator holds that the law does not authorize the consolidation of standard rural routes and that it was not the intent of congress to give such authority.

H. H. Billany, fourth assistant postmaster general, today informed Senator George that the postoffice department had proceeded to extend shorter routes into longer ones upon a construction placed of the law by the comptroller general.

The senator was told that from the "language of the postal salaries act only one standard rural route is recognized, mainly the 24-mile routes and that it is evident it was the intent of congress to abolish the distinction between horse-drawn vehicles routes and motor vehicles routes, imposed by the act of July 28, 1916.

Senator George declared that if the comptroller's interpretations were carried out large numbers of rural mail carriers would lose their jobs and that he does not intend for this to happen, so far as Georgia is concerned, at least.

MONTE CARLO

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

SYNOPSIS.

Sir Hargrave Wendever, country gentleman and financier, calls on a famous London physician for examination. The doctor tells him he cannot live for more than six or eight months. Wendever takes the blow standing and decides to go on with his plans for the winter as though nothing had happened. He feels, however, an urge to give a lift to some poor fellow creature. He experiments on the people he comes in contact with until he finds one who is in need of help. This proves to be a delicate-looking manicure girl, Violet Martin, who serves him regularly. He offers her and a member of her family a vacation of two months at his villa at Monte Carlo. Not having any family, Violet induces her fiance, Robert, to pose as her brother and come with her. Their host gives them a free rein in Monte Carlo, and they enjoy themselves to the fullest extent.

INSTALLMENT XXX.

THE FLIGHT.

Hargrave, who a minute or two before had felt the chill of the room, was suddenly conscious of being half stifled.

'Violet," he cried, "I'm glad you have told me this. I shall forget the little deceit. You are forgiven. We will talk about it all tomorrow. Just now you must go."

Her lips quivered.

He put her away from him, drew her back to her place upon the sofa, and seated himself by her side.

"You despise me," she murmured.

"Don't be absurd," he answered, with an attempt at lightness.

"But I know it. I feel it," she went on, her voice shaking. "You think that I've cheated, that I wanted all the beautiful things those other girls had, that I wanted your kindness, this amazing holiday, all that you have given me, and that I wanted it all without paying."

"Hush!" he begged her. "I never had so mean a thought."

"But it is true," she cried passionately. "You know yourself it is true. I have been horrible. I have deceived you, the dearest, the kindest, the most wonderful person in the world. But can't you understand me now?" she added, suddenly throwing her arms around his neck. "I want to pay—not to pay, to give—with all my heart—with everything."

She clung to him hysterically rather than passionately, trying to hide her face, her slim body shaking with sobs. In those few seconds, side by side with a sort of exquisite content, he seemed like a drowning man to be suddenly and acutely conscious of the vital crisis of life. He heard the physician's few solemn words. He saw Philip Gorse's kindly, sensitive face somewhere close at hand. He was proudly conscious in those few, unreal seconds, of the innate and unmasculine purity of his life, of those latest qualities which had made him always the protector of weaker people. Quietly, almost joyously, his arms suddenly went around her. He picked her up and carried her to the door.

"What are you doing with me?" she whispered, her hands still clasped around his neck.

"You shall see," he answered.

He took the key from the pocket of her dressing gown, unlocked the door, carried her across to her own room, carried her to her bed, and with masculine clumsiness drew up the coverlet. Then he leaned down, and for the first time his lips met hers. He held her face in both hands, while he kissed her tenderly. Then he stood away. Her arms fell listlessly on to the counterpane.

"Tomorrow, child," he said, "we will have a long talk. You shall give me all your confidence. Tomorrow I will give you some of mine."

She made no reply. He moved uneasily across the room towards the window, opened it a little wider, picked up her frock, some of her clothes which she seemed to have discarded recklessly, and hung them over the back of a chair. Then he turned towards the door.

"Good night," he said.

Her lips moved, but soundlessly. She was sitting up a little, leaning upon the palms of her hands, her eyes following his every movement. He opened the door and looked back. She was still there, still watching him. He closed it softly, crossed the landing and entered his own room. Now that it was over, now that he was able to fit things into his mind, he was conscious of a sense of relief, a sense of peace which surprised him. All the bitterness, the humiliation of the evening, had passed. He opened the window for a moment before he turned into bed, to find a fine rain falling and a mantle of velvety blackness upon the earth.

Francois, Hargrave's French valet, was a little earlier than usual when he presented himself in his master's bedroom on the following morning. Hargrave looked at him reproachfully.

"What is it?" he inquired.

"What?" Hargrave exclaimed, suddenly awake.

"Mademoiselle packed her own bag early this morning and descended without giving notice to anybody. She requested one of the underservants who were at work in the hall to fetch her a voiture. She left, one must believe, to catch the morning train to Paris."

'What time is it now?" Hargrave demanded, springing out of bed.

"Half past nine, monsieur. The train leaves at nine-forty from the gare."

"Some clothes as quick as you can," was the prompt command. "Never mind about the bath. Call down for some one to bring the Rolls-Royce round."

A quarter of an hour later Hargrave drew up outside the station in the hope that the train might have been late. He found, however, that it had left, punctual almost to the minute, and the station was empty. He took his place once more at the wheel, drove as fast as he dared down the Rue Grimaldi, and turned into the main road. At Eze a cloud of black smoke lent him temporary hope. He drew near the station, however, the train passed out. He kept behind until it had disappeared from view, then shot by. He was on the platform when it entered the station at Beaulieu, and after a moment or two of frantic search threw open the door of a second class carriage.

"Come!" he demanded, holding out his arms.

Violet was wedged in between a stout commis voyageur and a women with her basket on the way to Nice market. She looked at him for a moment piteously, then with a gleam of insurgent hope in her tired eyes. At his reiterated injunction she rose with passive obedience. The whistle had already sounded. He lifted her on to the platform. The commis voyageur, with a good humored grunt, tugged her bag from the rack, and threw it after them. They stood there watching the train crawl out.

"Thank God I've found you!" he exclaimed, with a breath of relief. She was very pale, but a little smile parted her lips at his words.

"You really mean that?" she asked eagerly. "I thought you'd be so glad to get rid of me."

"You poor dear!" he replied, taking her by the arm and summoning a porter for her bag. "I was never so glad to see any one in my life. I should have followed you all the way to Paris. Come along and I'll put you in the car."

She gave a little sigh—this time of happiness.

"I didn't dream of your coming to fetch me back," she confessed weakly, "but I'm very glad you did."

She sank into the luxuriously cushioned seat by his side with a murmur of content. There was in her face a great weariness, and he changed his first design of returning at once to the villa.

"You had some breakfast before you started?" he inquired.

She shook her head.

"Nothing at all?"

"Nothing. There wasn't time."

He turned into the narrow winding road which led upwards to the Middle Corniche, and cut through it higher still.

"We'll take our coffee in the clouds," he told her.

"How did you know?" she asked timidly. "I thought I'd stolen away without a sound."

"Francois told me" he replied. "Like a sensible fellow he came and told me directly he knew himself."

They climbed to an unfamiliar country. Mont Agel was lost in a wreath of mist, and they, too, passed through fingers of cloud on their way upwards. Everywhere around them a soft rain was falling—rain which was fresh and sweet, and which seemed to come to them warmed with the sunlight hidden behind the clouds. Hargrave drew up before the pink stuccolike hotel at the top of the hill.

On Tuesday there will be interviews with prominent Atlanta citias the main purpose of Miss Ludington's visit here is to bring before prominent citizens just the wonderful work the league is doing in order that there will be greater cooperation on the part of the men of the community. The league has always realized that without the spmpathetic understanding of the men, the work cannot go forward in the most effective way. The whole idea of the league is cooperation between the men and women and not separation.

At 11 o'clock on Tuesday Miss Ludington will meet with the state board of the league at headquarters. At 11 o'clock on Wednesday she will meet the Atlanta board and other members of the Atlanta league who care to hear Miss Ludington talk upon methods of work. She will come right down to details as to how a league should function and what the individual member should do and could do. This meeting will take place at the Chamber of Commerce in hall No. 1.

On Thursday Miss Ludington will be the honor guest at a meeting of the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs, of which Mrs. R. K. Rambo is the president.

The social feature of her stay will be the banquet at the Piedmont Driving club at 7:30 on Tuesday night, January 19. Those who have not yet completed their arrangements for tables should do so before noon Saturday, January 16.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga.—(adv.)

BEAUTIFUL ATLANTA SUB-DEBS ATTEND PI PI DANCE

Arrival of Miss Ludington Will Be of Great Interest To Organized Women

BY BEVERLY BURGESS.

All of Atlanta is awaiting the arrival of Miss Katherine Ludington Monday night.

"Who is Miss Ludington?" you ask.

Incidentally, probably—to her at least—she is the charming representative of one of the oldest families of the socially elect of Lynn, Connecticut.

Primarily and fundamentally, she is an outstanding figure in the suffrage world of today.

Miss Ludington's visit will be of only a few short days and everybody in Atlanta is trying to make the most of these few days in the way of crowding her for social or business appointments.

There will be all kinds of invitations showered upon her, the acceptance of which will, of necessity, be limited.

Of course the precedence of Miss Eleanor Raoul is undisputed, and to a "get-acquainted" dinner at her home on Lullwater road for the first evening of Miss Ludington's visit, Miss Raoul has invited the officers of the League of Women Voters—only—to meet her.

The outstanding social feature of these few crowded days will be the banquet at the Driving club Tuesday evening, at which, besides many other substantial citizens, the governor and mayor will honor Miss Ludington by their presence.

The official hostesses of this occasion will be a group of prominent Atlanta women. These are Miss Raoul, Miss Turman, Mrs. Neely, Mrs. Price-Smith, Mrs. Simcox, Mrs. Craig, Mrs. Hodgson and others.

Many reservations have been made, showing the eagerness with which Miss Ludington is being awaited.

Her visit is one of much significance to Atlanta as a whole, but to her women, in particular.

Last Night.

Wasn't the Pi Pi dance lovely?

Everyone expected it to be!

Especially was this so with the Pi Pi mothers backing it 100 per cent strong!

This also was exactly as it was expected and should be.

The invitations received a week or more ago were things of beauty in their delicate touch of blue and gold.

Last night the music was especially featured and this was certainly no mistake.

The girls—all—were in lovely new dancing frocks and marcellles. Both were particularly becoming.

Sophie, the president, looked charming in a pink georgette, heavily becrystaled, with pink slippers and hose to match.

Jinx, the vice president, knew how becoming yellow was to that exquisite blonde coloring of hers and this she wore.

The boys in their conventional tucks had the customary amount of—no—not that—there are other "customary" commodities in this world—gallantry, for instance, with which they filled up the measure to overflowing with the spirit—perish the thought which it seems I can't keep off of—of a bright and happy occasion.

The wonderful Pi Pi mothers really should be given especial recognition in their offices as chaperons.

But isn't it enough to ask how these Pi Pi girls could have given this charming dance had they not been daughters of Pi Pi mothers.

We are so sorry these girls do this only once a year!

Miss Roberts And Miss Conover Are Honor Guests

Miss Willa Roberts, associate editor of the Woman's Home Companion, and Miss Isable De Nyse Conover, head of the fashion department of this well-known magazine, were honor guests at the elaborately appointed luncheon given by the officers and past presidents of the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs Friday at 12:30 o'clock at the Piedmont Driving club, with Mrs. Robert K. Rambo, president of the organization, acting as official hostess.

These distinguished women are associated with Mrs. Anna Steese Richardson, head of the citizenship bureau of this notable publication, who visited Atlanta during the general federation biennial held here several years ago, who wrote an interesting article in the Woman's Home Companion on the hospitality and entertainment extended the general federation.

Mrs. Robert K. Rambo, president of the federation, presided, introducing Miss Roberts and Miss Conover, who made graceful little talks expressing the delightful impressions made on them by Atlanta people and the city itself, saying that next year they are planning to make a much longer stay here. Mrs. Rambo called on those present to introduce themselves and state the office held.

Mrs. Rambo wore a gown of black chiffon velvet, and her black beaver hat was trimmed with silver.

Glad Girls' Class Meets Sunday.

The Glad Girls' class of Capitol View Baptist church Sunday school will meet at the Masonic temple, corner Stewart and Dill avenues, Sunday morning at 9:30 o'clock. The members of the club are asked to read the first chapter of St. John, and are urged to have a hundred per cent attendance.

Mrs. Gunsaulus Is Honored at Luncheon.

Given as a compliment to Mrs. Mary Hines Gunsaulus, who leaves soon for a tour around the world, was the lovely luncheon Friday, given by Mrs. Cator Woolford, at her home in the Biltmore apartments.

The handsomely appointed table held as a central decoration a miniature ship, and at each guest's place were souvenir suitcases, trunks and hat boxes filled with bonbons. The place cards were attractive cards bearing verses of "Bon Voyage" to the honor guest.

Atlanta Junior Club To Study Orchestration.

Of great interest to all juniors in the city is the program of the Atlanta Junior club which will be given by Miss Eda Bartholomew on Saturday afternoon at Edico hall, the subject being "Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra." At this meeting the instruments of the orchestra will be shown by using the chart drawings in the possession of Miss Madeline Keipp and the appreciation of each instrument will be taught by playing special reproducing records. The program that the Minneapolis orchestra will play at the special matinee performance for juniors and school children in the city will be explained in detail so that every child who takes advantage of this meeting will have an unusual opportunity of appreciating the program when they hear it on the afternoon of February 8.

Miss Ruth Weegand urges the members of the chorus to meet promptly at 1:45 o'clock as the regular club program begins at 2:30 o'clock.

Saturday Tea Dance At Biltmore.

The tea-dance this afternoon at the Biltmore hotel will be one of the largest of the mid-winter season, assembling attractive out-of-town visitors, members of Atlanta society and the college contingent.

The largest party of the afternoon will be given by the members of Scabbard and Blade fraternity of Georgia Tech in compliment to their sponsors. The guests will include 75 young people.

Miss Phoebe Yancey, of Glenn Ridge, N. J., will be central figure in a party to be given by Mrs. Sam Hewlett, who has invited 14 guests. Miss Barbara Bonn, another popular visitor, will also be central figure in a party of six.

Others entertaining will be Miss Catherine Howell, Arthur Howell, W. H. Edwards, Miss Margaret Rogers, E. O. Faulkner, Dr. Ben Jones, Mrs. William Warren, Joseph Emerson Brown, Mrs. J. M. McCullough and others.

Mr. and Mrs. Clements Are Hosts at Party.

Mr. and Mrs. Myrick Clements entertained a number of friends at bridge on Friday night at their home in Decatur.

The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Tom Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Henderson, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Jones, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Royall, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Branch, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Ripley, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Trotti, Mr. and Mrs. Maynard Sanders, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Flake, Mr. and Mrs. Joe White Elder, Mr. and Mrs. Bunce Hall.

Forestry Committee Bridge Party.

Mrs. Herbert Choate with the following committee hopes to make an enjoyable occasion of the bridge party January 20. The co-chairman is Mrs. Courtland Winn.

Mrs. James T. Williams, Mrs. W. P. Dunn are in charge of the prizes.

The publicity is in charge of Mrs. W. O. Cheney and Mrs. W. S. Coleman.

The reception is in charge of Mrs. J. E. Springer, Mrs. W. E. Beckham, Mrs. J. N. Bateman, Mrs. H. K. Stanford, Mrs. J. H. Ewing, Mrs. R. C. Jessup and Mrs. George O'Bear.

A number of attractive prizes have been given, and one will go to every two tables, which will make the distribution uniform.

The forestry committee feeling an interest in the schools of our city will use the proceeds in the purchase of trees for Tech High and Boys' High school grounds in cooperation with the P.-T. association.

Mrs. Brindel Is Honor Guest At Series of Lovely Teas

Mrs. C. Egbert Brindel, of Mechanicsburg, Pa., was honor guest at the second of a series of lovely teas at which her sister, Mrs. J. Donald Hockman, whom she is visiting, entertained at her quarters at Fort McPherson, inviting a coterie of 40 ladies prominent in army social life to meet Mrs. Brindel.

Mrs. Melville E. Jarvis and Mrs. E. E. Haskell poured tea, and assisting the hostess in entertaining were Mrs. James Magee, Mrs. Clyde Johnston, Mrs. Henry Lueking and Mrs. George Carrington.

Mrs. Hockman was gowned in pink georgette crepe, and Mrs. Brindel's gown was of gray chiffon combined with lace, veiling gray satin.

Mrs. Hockman's tea given Thursday afternoon also complimented her attractive guest, who is a sister of Captain Hockman, and will be honored at several important social affairs during her visit to Atlanta.

Forty guests assembled.

Mrs. Leroy Eltinge and Mrs. George F. Baltzell poured tea at the exquisitely appointed table and assisting Mrs. Hickman in receiving were Mrs. Cecil Henry, Mrs. Boyd Clapham, Mrs. Emil Leard and Mrs. William Mitchell.

Mrs. Sherman To Be Visitor At State Federation Meet

BY MRS. ALONZO RICHARDSON, Director for Georgia in Federation of Women's Clubs.

Washington, January 15.—(Special.)—Announcement that Mrs. John D. Sherman, president of the Federation will be present at the convention of the Georgia Federation, to be held April 6-9 in Augusta, was an interesting bit of news gleaned for Georgians today at the session here of the executive board of the General Federation.

Mrs. Sherman will make a tour of the southeastern states at that time.

Atlanta was highly praised today for its three successive victories in the national home beautiful contest. President Ford, of the American Better Home movement, paid high tribute to Mrs. Newton Wing, who has been in charge of this movement in Atlanta.

The GILDED ROSE

BY MAY CHRISTIE

CHAPTER 42.

A Tempting Orchid.

"I also heard that you are catching a train early this afternoon," the newcomer went on, pleasantly. "I've brought my own car along, and I can run up to the station, if you'll permit me."

Rosilyn coloured. What would Landis say to that? If he had seen them both last night—but of course Mr. Briscoe had explained matters—wouldn't he think this second meeting, followed so abruptly on the heels of yesterday, a trifle odd?

"Does—does my husband—know you intended coming here?"

Briscoe gave his easy, well-bred laugh.

"I didn't say so. But, knowing Landis, he'll be glad you're being taken care of."

The manner of this was so possessive that the timid bride shrank farther into her shell. The free-and-easy ways of this smart set were quite beyond her comprehension.

She was comparatively silent throughout the brief meal. Her vis-a-vis chatted in his pleasant fashion.

He was companionable, was Rupert Briscoe. And today he gave no hint of ardour. Last night's parting words appeared to Rosilyn to have been but a figment of her own imagination.

As the moments slipped away, her reserve and shyness thawed a little. It was good to have a kindly, understanding friend. The little attention of this eminently attractive man stood out in sharp antithesis to her bridegroom's casual conduct.

The meal over, he handed her into his car.

"Which station?"

"Pennsylvania, please."

He gave the chauffeur his instructions and got in beside the girl.

"We're going down to Landis' country place," she said. "I've never seen it. I believe it's quite lovely, though he hasn't afforded to live there for years and years." Then she bit her lip over the tactlessness of the last remark. How ill-bred he would think her and her fortune! Hadn't some of his set—those hateful women at the wedding—referred to her as the "Gilded Rose?"

"You mean Royal Cliff? They haven't been able to let it for four years. It needed too much doing up, I understand."

"You've been there?" asked Rosilyn.

The man hesitated for an imperceptible moment.

"No." And then he added:

"I've only known Landis in the last three years, in a manner of speaking. Charming fellow! And—"—with a meaning glance at the girl beside him—"a very, very lucky one!"

She flushed again. Was he referring to her money? But of course he was, no matter how much he might camouflage such a statement! Only too painfully had it been brought to her consciousness that—without her money—she was zero, and—even though a wealthy woman now—of very little count in a husband's life!

Not that he didn't treat her with the utmost courtesy. Not that he, in words, had ever actually slighted her.

But yet . . . !

Rupert Briscoe lifted a little tissue paper package from a small compartment of his car, undid the wrappings, and drew out a magnificent specimen of a single orchid, with a spray of asparagus fern set all about it.

"I saw this in a street florist's window, and it intrigued me mightily," he remarked. "You'll wear it, won't you?"

Rosilyn drew back. Beautiful as was the flower, to the country girl there was something sinister in its strange, exotic loveliness!

"I—I couldn't. It wouldn't—suit me."

Conscious of the ungraciousness of that, she was distressed. Yet what else could she say?

"You are mistaken, child." For a moment, the caressing note was in the man's voice again. "I bought it because I had a fancy that it would bring out a hidden 'something' in your personality—'something' that I can't define, but which glimmered for a moment once or twice last night!" He gave his well-bred, careless laugh, and yet, behind his eyes, a purpose lay. "Don't think me mad! I often take such fancies, and I always make a point of humoring them."

Without touching it, Rosilyn regarded the exotic flower.

"You'll think me mad when I tell you that it frightens me! Oh, I know it's very beautiful and very rare and fearfully expensive, but—" she shivered—"somehow it suggests, beneath its loveliness, death and decay and slimy swamps and creeping things!"

"Come, come!" He made as though to pin the orchid on her gown.

"It's perfectly true." She smiled ruefully, at the same time drawing away from him. "They do grow in jungly swamps, don't they? And death lurks under their beauty! Even the petals of the flowers, so waxen, are—are sort of corpselike!"

The man beside her gave a hearty laugh.

"Such an imagination! Hadn't you an Irish mother?"

"Yes."

"Then that accounts for it! The bit about the 'creeping things' is good. You mean that I'm the serpent entering your Eden, don't you?"

She flushed to the roots of her hair at that. Her Eden? She had missed it, hadn't she? Landis and Lydia. . . . .

"Such a fuss about a flower! Of course I'll wear it." She took the orchid from his hand and pinned it coquettishly to her left shoulder, in the newest fashion. "Will I pass muster now?"

BEAUTY CHATS

BY EDNA K. FORBES.

REDUCING.

For all the thousands of women who want to keep within a certain weight, or take off perhaps ten pounds or so without too much discomfort, I should like to recommend a list of foods which will be helpful. At the same time, this diet will clear up the complexion, if it is sallow or blotchy.

For breakfast, a small orange, or half a grapefruit, without sugar, one slice of unbuttered toast and a cup of black coffee, or tea, plain or with lemon. If you must have the beverage sweet, take a bit of a saccharine tablet instead of sugar.

This may seem very rigid. Breakfast is the pleasantest meal of the day to me, and to a great many others. Therefore, if you associate black coffee with the end of a large and perfect dinner, you can have it with hot milk, if you are a little more strict with your food the rest of the day. If the milk is scalding hot and the coffee is poured over it, it tastes as good as cream, and of course isn't nearly so fattening.

Try a vegetable lunch—any vegetables except baked beans or potatoes. Have them cold in a salad, with boiled dressing instead of mayonnaise, or hot if you like them so, or if you need not be so very careful of your reducing, with a little bit of boiled white fish. Go easy on the bread and the starchy things and don't touch butter at all. Or have a simple egg dish. Again, tea or coffee without sugar or cream. And why have a candy with lunch? It will do you good to go without.

Dinner—Lean beef, the lean part of a lamb chop, a little lamb or mutton, or boiled fish. Never anything fried, for then you eat fat, nor pork or ham, which are very fattening. Vegetables—but not beans or potatoes. Salad, but with almost no oil in the dressing. Dessert—here's a snag, most desserts put on ounces of flesh. Flour, cornstarch, butter, sugar, nuts, milk and such things are fattening, and how many desserts are there without these ingredients? Keep to stewed fruit and boiled rice, or raw fruit, until you weigh what you want to weigh.

Mrs. D. F. H.—When making an eye wash you should boil the water for a minute to be sure that it is sterilized. From one teaspoonful to a tablespoonful of boric acid to a pint of water should be used, according to the necis of the case. It the eyes are very much inflamed it will be necessary to use the stronger solution.

George F. D.—There are special dentifrices for artificial teeth that are much better for the purpose than those used for natural ones. Any large drug store will have all the best of these preparations.

Miss Constance D. F.—Agar-agar is a Japanese seaweed and not a drug. It is taken with a food, such as a cereal of a morning, as it is tasteless. About a tablespoonful will be enough for most people.

Young Mother.—It is very unusual for a child to walk at nine months of age, and unless the child is very strong, it should not be encouraged to bear its weight for long at a time at so early an age.

Edna Kent Forbes is now ready to fill a long-felt need on the part of her readers—that of supplying the most important of her excellent beauty hints in illustrated pamphlet form. To secure this valuable information you must address Miss Forbes in care of this paper, asking for her pamphlet, "Beauty," and enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 10 cents in stamps.

Miss Rowell Is Hostess to Army Circle at Supper

One of the most enjoyable affairs of the week-end was the buffet supper at which Miss Gertrude Rowell was hostess on Friday evening at the quarters of her parents, Colonel and Mrs. Frank Rowell, at Fort McPherson, the occasion honoring Lieutenant and Mrs. William Mitchell, whose wedding was a recent interesting event.

Fortnightly Hop.

The regular fortnightly hop was given Friday evening at the Officers' club at Fort McPherson and assembled a group of prominent army officers and their wives, together with a group of charming visitors who will grace the occasion.

Mrs. Emmett Smith Is Honor Guest.

Mrs. B. S. Cohen and Mrs. S. H. Rosenberg were joint hostesses Thursday afternoon at a beautiful mah jongg tea given at the Y. W. H. A. in honor of Mrs. Emmett Smith, of Pittsburgh, who is the guest of her sister, Mrs. P. Cohen.

Governor McDaniel In Feeble Health At Monroe Home

Monroe, Ga., January 15.—(Special.)—Friends of ex-Governor Henry D. McDaniel will regret to learn that he is quite feeble at his home in this city. Governor McDaniel succeeded Alexander H. Stephens as governor of Georgia and made one of the ablest chief executives the state ever had. His administration was characterized by some of the most important legislation ever passed in the state and his entire career has been one of distinction and service to the people and much concern is felt here for his health.

He was 89 years old on September 4.

An Unfailing Shopping Guide

Today is Saturday, and the usual week-end rush of grocery shopping is on again for Atlanta housewives. Proceeding on a systematic basis, thousands of Atlanta home-keepers make it a regular practice to "shop" in THE CONSTITUTION'S GROCERY ADS before they make their week-end rounds of stores to purchase items for Sunday meals.

Every day THE CONSTITUTION offers you quality merchandise of every type and form at prices that are to your best advantage. In a sense, it is one great mercantile establishment where you can find advertised any article you may need. Comparative prices and various brands are offered for your choice; and, once you make your selections from the advertisements, your shopping is rendered easier and the time you devote to it is materially reduced.

Encourage that habit of reading CONSTITUTION ADS for bargains. In this connection, you'll find in this issue some mighty attractive offers in fruits, vegetables, meats, canned goods, staple and fancy groceries of all kinds; in shoes for all; in men's clothing and accessories, and many other articles.

Your Boy and Your Girl

BY ARTHUR DEAN, SC. D.

The Parent Counsellor

Dr. Dean will answer all signed letters pertaining to parents' problems with their boys and girls. Writers' names are never printed. Only questions of general interest answered in this column, but all letters will be answered by mail if written in ink and a stamped, self-addressed envelope is inclosed. Address Arthur Dean, in care of this paper.

MARY HAD A LITTLE COLD.

"Mary hasn't anything the matter with her except a common cold," says mother. "She often has the snuffles. In fact her brother, Johnnie, has them from October to May and it takes about all my time washing his handkerchiefs. Sometimes he coughs something awful."

Nothing but a "common" cold! Colds take more dollars and cents out of the value of an education than any other sickness in that they are responsible for a greater loss of time from school than any other single cause.

The best time to put out the fire is before it starts. Likewise, the best time to "break up" a cold is before it starts. Let's have every day a cold prevention day.

Here are the best preventives: Plain, nourishing foods; plenty of sleep; six glasses of water a day; frequent bathing (to train the skin to stand changes in temperature); sensible clothing; breathing through the nose; keeping the feet dry; plenty of fresh air, by night as well as by day.

Have your child understand that an assault with a cough or sneeze may easily do him more harm than a blow with a fist. He has a right to protection. Coughing and sneezing should be done in a handkerchief.

"Mary had a little cold,
It started in her head,
And everywhere that Mary went
That cold was sure to spread.

It followed her to school one day—
There wasn't any rule—
It made the children cough and sneeze
To have that cold in school.
The teacher tried to drive it out:
She tried hard, but—kerchoo-oo-
For teacher caught it too."

OUR CONVERSATION CORNER A Split.

When I went to one of my grandmother's parties last week I met a boy who is two years older than I am. The following Monday I met him on my way to school and he talked with me. When I got home I told my father and mother. My father said I had no business talking with him and should have told him to go on and mind his own business. My mother sided with me.

I am never allowed to go out with boys and don't particularly want to, but did my father treat me right?

Love As An Inspiration.

I simply hate the thought of my 18-year-old boy having a girl. I think it will be the cause of his failing in school.

DEVOTED MOTHER.

Answer—On the other hand, it may be an inspiration to him. It all depends upon the girl. Real love, if it is worth anything at all in youth, presupposes ambition. As I saw in the paper the other day, "The boy who will not study because he is in love has the backbone of an oyster." He may need a girl but I guess he needs more of my "How to Study," "Life Chart" and "List of Vocational Guidance Books."

Food-Fussing.

INQUIRING.

Answer—The whole question of food-fussing is treated in the leaflet which I am enclosing.

Blames Her Father.

My parents are Italian and they are mighty strict with me. I want some freedom. I am not allowed to go out nights or do anything I want to do.

FIFTEEN.

Surely your father will let you go to night school and learn stenography and typewriting? This will give you a chance to meet young people, to learn and to get ahead.

Fear of Nothing.

INTERESTED MOTHER.

Answer—Your youngsters were not subjected to undue noise or sudden disturbance in the days of infancy. Their life was guarded so that the simple things which would arouse the emotion of fears were not permitted to happen. Their early days were undisturbed and by no process of association were they afraid of situations which should only be a joy and satisfaction.

Miss Adams To Be Hostess at Supper For Miss Milner

An interesting event of this evening will be the buffet supper at which Miss Lucy Marvin Adams will entertain at her home on Piedmont avenue in honor of Miss Vera Milner, who sails next week for points in the far east. The guests will include the members of the staff of Camp Highland, Miss Adams being the director of the camp and Miss Milner one of its head counsellors.

Miss Milner, who is a popular teacher in the Atlanta schools, plans to spend a year teaching in one of the mountain schools near Lucknow, India, where she will visit for some time before her work begins. Sailing on January 20 on the City of Calenia, she will land in Bombay, proceeding from there to Lucknow.

JACK DELANEY EASILY DEFEATS YOUNG FITZSIMMONS

Miss Wills Lands In France; Starts Tennis Squabble

Paris, January 15.—(By the Associated Press.)—Helen Wills, trim, graceful and recovered from the effects of an "atrocious" Atlantic crossing, flitted through Paris today on her way to the Riviera, having landed from the liner DeGrasse at Havre this morning.

America's woman tennis champion remained in cold and dreary Paris for only a few hours, but her short stay stirred French tennis circles to its depths, revealing the danger of a crisis in the tennis relations of France and England.

Carefree and happy over her departure for warmer climes, Miss Wills left for Cannes, blissfully unconscious that she is the innocent cause of annulment sent to the British tennis authorities by the French tennis federation today.

Immediately after her official reception was finished at the Saint Lazaire station, French tennis officials asked her whether she would enter the French hard court championship tournament which opens June 2. Miss Wills replied that she was very sorry, but that she must compete in the Wightman cup competition in England. Then it dawned on the French officials that the dates for the Wightman cup play conflicted with their own hard court championships and they hurriedly called a meeting which drafted a letter to the secretary of the British tennis federation asking that the Wightman cup dates either be advanced or postponed. French officials expressed the opinion that the conflict was only the result of a misunderstanding, but added that the British federation was informed on November 28 of the dates selected for the hard court championship and only chose the Wightman cup dates on December 10.

May Abandon Wimbledon.

"We sincerely hope that this is not a challenge thrown at French tennis," the letter said.

French officials after the meeting openly expressed the sentiment that unless the British recede from their present stand Wimbledon will have to struggle along without French players in 1926. Their letter requested that the Wightman cup dates be advanced to May 29 and 30.

The French federation today received a cablegram from Jones W. Mersereau, president of the United States Lawn Tennis association, promising that an American team would participate in the French hard courts tournament June 2 "unless unforeseen circumstances occur."

The French are sending a team consisting of Borotra, LaCoste and Jacques Brugnon to compete in the American covered courts championships in New York, February 15, and the visit of the American team would return this compliment. A team match between France and the United States would be played a few days before the championships here open.

AMERICAN OFFICIAL DOUBTS CONFLICT.

New York, January 15.—(AP)—Jones W. Mersereau, president of the United States Lawn Tennis association, said tonight he was not aware of any conflict in tennis dates between France and England, and expressed the belief that arrangements would permit Helen Wills and other members of the American women's team to compete in scheduled events in both countries next June.

Dates for the Wightman cup team matches with England, he said, had not been fixed definitely, but probably would be held June 19, just prior to the opening of the Wimbledon championship, thus avoiding any conflict with the French tournaments.

PAOLINO GOES TO DINNER

:: Spanish Champion Writes Hot Letter When Criticised ::

AND SHOCKS CLUB MEMBERS

Bilbao, Spain, January 15.—(AP)—A prize fighter and the intellectuals of Bilbao are at odds over the question of whether the fighter should have been given an honor seat at a banquet.

The athenaeum of Bilbao, made up of the intelligentsia, recently gave a dinner in honor of Iganazio Zuloaga, famous Spanish painter of bulls and women. At the right of Zuloaga sat no less a celebrity than Paolino Uzcudun, the Spanish heavyweight champion. This brought a protest from several members of the athenaeum, who declared Paolino's presence did not correspond with the dignity of such a cultural society as the athenaeum.

Paolino, known as "the Tiger of the Pyrenees," who combines wood chopping with pugilism, for his living, promptly hit back at the savants in a letter to the newspaper El Pueblo Vasco.

"I never believed," he said, "that to be a boxer was dishonest and therefore never thought that my manifestation of sympathy and admiration for my countryman Zuloaga at the dinner was sufficient to make some of the members of the athenaeum feel so degraded because of my presence as to resign from that body.

"What I believe, however, and of this I am convinced, is that I, a boxer, native of Spain, never could have adopted such an attitude of enmity as was shown against me by the athenaeum members, an attitude to which I could only properly answer with a knockout."

Brown Squads Stick in Front

The second round of the Atlanta Junior High School Basketball league Friday found the Brown Junior High school girls in action with the Decatur Junior high school girls and the Brown boys team and the Decatur boys team in action at the auditorium. The Smith boys and girls teams were engaged in a battle with the boys and girls teams of the O'Keefe Junior High school on the Jewish alliance court.

The Brown teams kept a clean sheet by winning from the Decatur teams by close scores.

The boys of the O'Keefe school took the worst drubbing that a team of that school has ever received. They did not score a field goal.

Atlantan Takes Shooting Honor

Pinehurst, N. C., January 15.—(AP)—Joseph H. R. Cothran, Atlanta, carried off what is considered to be premier honor of the week by winning the mid-winter championship match here today in the annual trapshooting tournament. Shooting from the 20-yard line, he broke 94, one bird better than Elmer Gardner, Bernardsville, N. J., and Charles Young, Springfield, O., who each had 93.

Last year's match also was taken by an Atlanta entrant, Mrs. J. C. Wright, who broke 84.

Under ideal conditions, Cothran shot his best and accomplished today what he failed to do on eight previous attempts.

Frank Troeh, Portland, Ore., broke 80 and Mrs. Wright tied Mrs. W. C. Andrews, Atlanta, only other woman competing, with 81.

SLIGHT CHANGES FOR GEORGES' INTERVIEW

New York, January 15.—(AP)—A more accurate version of Georges Carpentier's interview with newspapermen, given after his arrival from France, came to light today—all because one of the interviewers understood French. This interviewer's translation of the French fighter's remarks and the same remarks as interpreted for newspapermen by Jack Curley, the boxer's American manager, follow:

Curley to Carpentier: "What do you want to give the boys, Georges?"

Carpentier to Curley: "Tell these fellows anything you want."

Curley to newspapermen: "Georges say he is very happy to be back in this country again and enjoys, above all, his association with the writers."

Carpentier to Curley: "Get rid of this gang as soon as possible. I've got a date at 7:30."

Curley to newspapermen: "He says he would like to fight Paul Berlenbach for the lightweight title and wishes you boys a happy new year."

VANDY CENTER DEFEATS TECH IN 27-23 GAME

Nashville, Tenn, January 15.—(Special.)—A very, very tall young man won a basketball game in the "Y" gym here Friday night, 27 to 23, when the Commodores engaged in a cage conflict with a swarm of Yellow Jackets from Georgia Tech. He not only was very, very tall, but he played center.

But the very, very tall young man was not Tiny Hearn, who, according to all the experts would pour points into the net faster than water pours over Niagara. The very, very tall young man who decided the issue was James Stuart. He performs in behalf of Josh Cody's Commodores at center. James Stuart flipped seven shots through the iron circle and added a free pitch to bring the Commodores bounding along to victory.

Not only did the very, very tall Commodore enroll almost two-thirds of the entire total compiled by Vandy but his floor work twice enabled Kenneth Windes to pocket the sphere with shots beneath the meshes.

The Cody people unleashed the most robust attack they have displayed in the present campaign.

Nick George proved the very excellent guard he has been reputed to be. Moreland and Wilde, the Tech forwards, were firing away all night from around the 17-foot line, but the former was able to sink only a single shot while the Tech captain collected two goals.

Lineup and Summary:

VANDY (27)	Pos.	(23) TECH

Epworth League Plays 3 Games

Three games of basketball were played at the Wesley Memorial court Friday night in the Epworth Basketball league.

Fairburn failed to show up to meet Park Street Seniors. Wesley Memorial team defeated Capitol View 19 to 17. St. Johns team defeated Park street intermediate team, 34 to 5. The winners did not let their opponents score in the second period.

Atlantan Heads Field Trial Club

P. M. Essig, a field trial enthusiast, returned to his home in Atlanta Friday from Grand Junction, Tenn., where he attended the annual meeting of the United States Field Trial club and was elected president of the club. The United States club is one of the largest and most prominent organizations of its kind in the world.

More than 100 dogs were present for the contests, Mr. Essig said, but he was unable to remain for the closing day, which was Friday. Next week the national championship will be contested, with three hours work each day for the dogs.

The United States Field Trial club was organized 30 years ago and has been an outstanding organization among sportsmen since the days of the famous Gladstone and Count Noble, which performed at Grand Junction meets and made the town famous.

Aside from Mr. Essig the club elected the following officers: Vice president, J. Curtis King, of Memphis; A. P. Rose, Grand Junction, secretary-treasurer.

Baseball Managers Who Have Made Game's History

(Following is the forty-third article of a series entitled "Rounding Third," by Hughie Jennings, on his 34 years of major league baseball service. Jennings, discoverer of Ty Cobb, the Georgia Peach, and central figure in some of baseball's biggest developments, writes an interesting history of the national game in this series. He also analyzes the greatest figures of baseball during the last 34 years.)

BY HUGH A. JENNINGS.

Chapter 43.

The old Boston team was managed by Frank Selee, one of the great managers of baseball. Selee had never played the game, but he was a keen judge of playing talent, had an even temper and defeat never set him back. He was never cast down over losing a game; it was past history with Selee and tomorrow was another day. That was Selee's philosophy. His fatherly talks with the team at meetings and his talks with individual players brought far greater return than if he had bawled them out.

Selee was unusually successful as manager of the Boston team. He won pennants in 1897 and 1898, and under his management Boston never finished lower than fourth. Later on he went to Chicago and there built up a combination that proved a sensation of baseball, although he was not in charge of the club when it reached its pinnacle. Unfortunately, Selee was taken ill and had to go to the mountains in an endeavor to regain his health. He never recovered from the illness, but he lived long enough to see the day when the team he constructed won the National league pennant and world championship in 1907 and 1908 under the management of Frank Leroy Chance, who had been captain of the Cubs while Selee was manager.

Retiring Man.

Selee was very retiring. You rarely ever saw him except on the bench. He arrived at the park shortly before the start of the game and he generally took his seat on the players' bench about the time the umpires were announcing the batteries. As soon as the game ended he disappeared into the clubhouse and emerged only after every one had left the park. His play was always simple but effective. He used few signals, unlike some managers today who try to employ big and complicated sets of signals. Selee went on the assumption that a few signals well learned will get you a great deal more than many signals not thoroughly learned and confusing.

When ill health forced Selee to leave Frank Chance stepped into his place. Chance was a hard-going, aggressive ball player. He had the fighting spirit and was a good leader. He set a fine example and he guided the Cubs into baseball fame. Chance was always a driver; he would first use persuasion and when that failed he resorted to physical force. If words did no good then Chance picked up a bat. He had several hard boys on his team that liked to kick over the traces and Chance had opportunity on several occasions to make use of his knowledge of fisticuffs. Being a player-manager, he set an example for others by hustling. He took blame for any defeat for which he was in any way responsible, and he always demanded that his players do the same. He was a good hitter, a fine fielder and base-runner.

John J. McGraw is the best manager of all time and his record proves this assertion. His success lies in shrewd observations of plays and players. No man in the game ever detected a weakness in a player or team more quickly than McGraw. Not alone is he a thorough student of the game, but he knows how to impart his knowledge to his players. He insists that his suggestions and instructions be strictly adhered to. When he detects a weakness in batting, fielding or base-running in one of his players he will give a practical demonstration on how to overcome such weakness.

Strict Disciplinarian.

There is one thing about the criticisms of McGraw which is lacking in the criticisms of many managers; they are always constructive. He is a strict disciplinarian and insists that training rules be observed at all times. He will overlook a slip on the field when he knows the player is trying. He always carries the respect of his men because they recognize the wisdom and benefit of his advice.

McGraw has absolute confidence in his own judgment. Take, as an example, the case of Larry Doyle. He was an erratic fielder when he joined the Giants and continued to be erratic. The crowd "got on" Doyle, criticized him for his misplays and centered a verbal attack on him. Any time that Doyle walked out of the dougout and on the playing field there were cries of "Take him out" from the hostile fans in the stand. McGraw refused to take out Doyle. He stuck by him and was vindicated in his judgment and confidence when Doyle became a crack second baseman, an exceptional hitter and one of the greatest favorites that ever graced the Polo Grounds in a New York unifozm.

The case of George Kelly was similar. They used to "ride" Kelly and McGraw was bitterly criticized for keeping him in the lineup, but he kept him in and Kelly developed into the best first sacker of his day.

Another case in point is that of "Rube" Marquard, the left-handed pitcher that the Giants bought from Indianapolis for $11,000, at that time a record price for a minor league pitcher. He got a bad start and the press and public tagged him "The $10,000 Lemon," but McGraw hung on. He kept him on the club for two years and then had the pleasure of seeing him suddenly develop into a sensational left-handed pitcher.

McGraw has developed more good ball players than any two managers the game has had. His men have not been flashes in a single season, but they continued among the leaders. Whenever one of them began slipping McGraw had a man ready to take his place. That is the chief reason why his teams have continued finishing "one-two" in the pennant races.

ATHLETIC CLUB FACES ALBANY TEAM TONIGHT

Coach Bean's unbeaten Atlanta Athletic club basketball quintet will meet the fast Albany Y. M. C. A. team tonight at 8:30 o'clock on the Auburn avenue court in the only week-end basketball melee scheduled for Atlanta.

Unfortunately for the general public, the game will be played before members of the club only. The weekly dance will take place on the basketball court immediately after the game.

The Athletic club team has been going fine this season and has registered easy victories over Furman and Fort Benning, but tonight the locals will meet a team expected to test its mettle.

The Albany team has not been going as well this year as in former years, but it is undergoing a period of constructive basketball. A comparatively new and green team will face the locals. There are one or two veterans on the club but the majority of the players and substitutes are newcomers in fast basketball.

Albany has played more games thus far than any other organized basketball team in the state. Last week it played two games, winning from Howard college, losing a hard-fought game to J. P. C.

SMITH WINNER OF TEXAS OPEN GOLF TOURNEY

San Antonio, January 15.—(AP)—MacDonald Smith, of New York, who last year lost the Texas open golf tournament championship to Joe Turnsea, of Elmsford, N. Y., by one putt, established today a firm claim to the 1926 title by scoring 138 in the first medal competition on the Brackenridge park municipal course. The easterner pro shot two under par on each round.

Bobby Cruickshank, of Chicago, turned in 141 early in the afternoon, which stood until Smith's threesome came in shortly before 6 o'clock.

Two New Players For Southern League

Los Angeles, Calif., January 15.—(AP)—Sale of Pitcher Queen, of the Topeka club of the Southwestern league to the Chattanooga club of the Southern league, and Second Baseman Butler, of Topeka, to Nashville, of the Southern league, was announced here today.

ASHES OF SMITH SCATTERED ON GRIDIRON

Berkeley, Cal., January 15.—Over the gridiron on which he won fame as a coach, an airplane today scattered the ashes of Andy Smith. Thus the last wishes of the late football mentor of the University of California were carried out.

"Sprinkle my ashes over Berkeley stadium," Smith asked, when he lay dying ten days ago in a Philadelphia hospital. Lieutenant J. R. Glascock, an aviator, and close friend of the late coach, volunteered for the task.

While college students many of whom had learned football from Andy, members of the faculty of the University of California, and other friends stood with bared heads, Glascock carried aloft a small urn containing Smith's ashes. Diving out of a bank of gray clouds, he sent his plane roaring the length of the stadium, scattering the ashes as he flew.

GEORGIA WINS OVERGENERALS BY 47-24 SCORE

Lexington, Va., January 15.—(Special.)—The University of Georgia's powerful cage quintet handed the Washington and Lee Generals a 47-to-24 defeat here tonight in a contest which was fast and exciting throughout. Taking the lead towards the middle of the first half, the red-clad visitors shot goals spectacularly.

The Generals fought desperately during the entire melee, but were unable to stem the attack of the Bulldogs, who also gave a fine exhibition of guarding, keeping the Blue and White from ringing up points time and again.

Florence led the attack for the visitors, caging seven field baskets and two foul goals, but was closely followed by Keene and Captain Richardson, who tallied 11 and 10 points, respectively.

Lane, with eight points to his credit, led the Blue and White offense and McCandless, substituting late in the final half, added five points to the General's total, sinking a field basket and three foul goals through the meshes. Spotts also rang up five points for the locals. Captain Wilson and Urmey starred defensively for Washington and Lee, while the guarding of Huguley and Forbes of Georgia was of the highest order.

Lineup and Summary.

University School Beaten by Lanier

Macon, Ga., January 15.—(Special.) Mallard and Underwood, of Lanier, scored enough points to defeat University school's basketball team at Lanier gym tonight, 26 to 20.

Both teams began the game with a whirlwind of action. The second half was full of flashy playing by both teams. The U. S. B. went after the poets and quickly tied the score, 16-all, but Lanier got busy and took the lead.

Ruby Robert's Son Is Sorry Opponent In Garden Battle

BY FRANK GETTY.

Madison Square Garden, New York, January 15.—Young Bob Fitzsimmons proved only a slim sliver off the old block Friday night, when he was easily beaten in a 10-round bout by Jack Delaney, of Bridgeport.

Making his first appearance against a heavyweight, Delaney proved a decided disappointment, but at that he was much too good for the ungainly Fitzsimmons.

Missing badly throughout the fight, the Bridgeport boxer got home often enough to the head with overhand right chops to keep the New Jersey heavyweight on the defensive throughout most of the bout.

It was one of the slowest fights seen in the new garden, where Young Bob's illustrious father would have fought to glory if there had been such edifices in his day.

Fitzsimmons' advertised left hand proved ineffective against Delaney, who kept his distance throughout most of the battle, outboxing Young Bob whenever the latter would mix it.

On his showing Friday night Delaney is capable of outpointing most of the country's heavyweights, but he had none of the fire, speed and punch he showed against Berlenbach.

Start Is Slow.

Delaney was fighting coolly, and was slipping Bob's left past his head and countering with stiff lefts to the New Jersey heavyweight's head. Several times in the third round, Jack made Fitz look foolish and sank his right in Bob's body.

Fitzsimmons stumbled awkwardly about the ring in the fourth, unable to land. Delaney landed with a right hook to the jaw which dropped the Jerseyman. Fitz caught hold of Jack as he fell and dragged him down with him. Both were up before the count started, but Bob was groggy and twice more Delaney shot his right to the jaw, making Fitzsimmons' knees sag.

Delaney Still Attacks.

The fifth began where the fourth left off, with Delaney shooting his left to the body and an overhand right to the jaw, without return. Jack was making a monkey of young Bob.

Both missed badly during the sixth, and the crowd began to complain. Fitz landed the only telling blow, a right to the jaw. Jack's lip was badly swollen.

Delaney was missing again in the eighth and the crowd began to yell for Bob. The Jerseyman smashed his left repeatedly to Jack's face, which was bleeding badly.

GREATEST COCKING MAIN IN HISTORY FOR FLORIDA

:: NEW YORK SPORTSMEN GET PROSPECTUS ::

New York, January 15.—New York sportsmen who seek a new thrill are interested in a prospectus announcing that the "Derby of the Cocking World" starts next Tuesday at Orlando, Fla., to continue for three days.

Eighty-five cock fights are on the program arranged for this novel international championship. Prices totalling $9,000, to be divided among the four fighting cocks which survive to the semi-finals, are advertised.

The entries are said to include the best birds from Cuba, Mexico and the United States. The winner receives $4,000, the other finalists $2,500, and the two cocks which are put out in the semi-finals divide the rest of the purse.

According to the prospectus, there are to be twelve entries of 11 cocks each in the international tournament, with an entrance fee of $750 for each entry.

"The greatest cock-fighting tournament the world has ever known," is the way the three-day event is described by its promoters.

"No drinking or swearing is to be allowed," the prospectus warns. Anyone guilty of abusive language or showing signs of intoxicants will be expelled."

"No gambling is allowed," the notice says, adding naively, "except that you may back your favorite cock."

HIGH LIGHTS OF HISTORY — Pontiac's Plot Against Detroit. — by J. CARROLL MANSFIELD

AMONG THE FRENCH STRONGHOLDS THAT FELL INTO THE HANDS OF THE ENGLISH, AS A RESULT OF THE FRENCH AND INDIAN WAR, WAS THE FORT AT DETROIT.

BUILT IN 1701 BY THE SIEUR DE CADILLAC, THIS FORT CONTROLLED THE WATERWAY FROM LAKE ERIE TO LAKE HURON AND WAS ONE OF THE STRONGEST MILITARY OUTPOSTS IN THE NORTHWEST.

3-27

©1925, BY THE McCLURE NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE.

ANGERED BY THE COMING OF THE ENGLISH, THE TRIBES OF THE REGION FORMED A FORMIDABLE CONFEDERACY IN 1763 TO DRIVE OUT THESE NEW MASTERS—THIS LEAGUE WAS PLANNED BY PONTIAC, AN OTTAWA CHIEFTAIN OF GREAT ABILITY, AND SECRETLY INCITED BY THE FRENCH.

ONE DAY A FRIENDLY OJIBWAY MAIDEN WARNED MAJOR GLADWIN, THE COMMANDER AT DETROIT, OF A TREACHEROUS PLOT TO SEIZE THE POST.—PONTIAC AND MANY BRAVES WERE COMING TO THE FORT TO HOLD A COUNCIL WITH THE ENGLISH, EACH WITH A SAWED-OFF RIFLE CONCEALED UNDER HIS BLANKET, AND AT A GIVEN SIGNAL THEY WOULD RISE AND SLAY THE GARRISON.

GLADWIN MADE HURRIED PREPARATIONS FOR DEFENCE AND WHEN PONTIAC ARRIVED FOR THE "COUNCIL" HE FOUND THE WHITE MEN DRAWN UP READY FOR ACTION. A COUNCIL WAS HELD WITHOUT THE SIGNAL FOR THE ATTACK BEING GIVEN, AND, AFTER WARNING PONTIAC THAT HIS PLOT WAS KNOWN, THE INDIANS WERE ALLOWED TO GO. PONTIAC LATER BESIEGED DETROIT BUT WAS DRIVEN OFF.

New York, January 15.—(AP)—Under the persistent hammering of bear traders, stock prices today broke away on the down side from the narrow trading area within which they had been fluctuating for the last fortnight. Net declines of 1 to 5 points were registered by a long list of active issues, with the final quotations generally around the lowest of the day, and the rail and industrial averages in new low ground for the year. Trading was in substantially increased volume, the day's sales running over two million shares.

The reaction took place in the face of generally favorable trade and financial news. Call money held at 4 1-2 per cent all day, but loans below that figure were reported in the "outside market." The weekly statement of the Federal Reserve bank showed slight improvement in the credit position and the weekly mercantile reviews were optimistic.

Commodity markets continued irregular. Cotton futures showed net advances of 8 to 33 points on what appeared to be covering by near month shorts. Active wheat options showed fractional recessions with selling inspired by reports of large Australian shipments and lower prices in the Argentine. Raw sugar was unchanged. Coffee fell back 1 to 15 points on realizing.

Huge blocks of U. S. Steel common were pressed for sale throughout the session with the result that the stock sagged two points to 132 1-2, or 3 1-2 points below the offering price of the Steel corporation to its employees in the annual stock subscription plan announced earlier in the week. Other standard industrials also were hard hit, Dupont and U. S. Cast Iron Pipe breaking 6 1-2 points.

American Can dropped 4, to 281, and Allied Chemical, General Electric, Interboro Rapid Transit, International Combustion Engineering, National Lead, Pullman, Railway Steel Spring, Sloss-Sheffield, South Porto Rico Sugar, Savage Arms, Union Bag and Paper, United States Cast Iron Pipe and United States Realty and Improvement showing net losses of 3 points or more.

Heavy selling of the motors followed the announcement that directors of the Hudson company had declared only the regular 75c dividend, that stock breaking to 40 and then rallying to 111 for a net loss of 4 5-8 on the day. General Motors, Chrysler and Mack Trucks each dropped about 3 points and several others in that group yielded a point or two. Nash Motors, on the other hand, jumped 7 points to 513.

Among the few industrial issues to move against the current trend were American International corporation, Associated Oil, Case Threshing Machine company, Howe Sound, Porto Rican American Tobacco and National Cloak and Suit. Good buying also was noted in Rock Island, Norfolk & Western and Wabash, but the other rails yielded with the industrials, although the losses were not as large.

Uncle Ray Says

"Dear Uncle Ray: I like all of the stories in your Corner, but of them all I like your little Saturday talks the best."

This is an example of some of the comments sent to me by readers of the Corner. Other readers say that they like the Greek, Roman or Egyptian stories best. Still others like the stories on science and geography. Many ask about the lives of men and women.

All in all, I think we have hit upon the very best plan for our Corner, and that is to talk about one kind of subject one week, and another kind another week.

Before Christmas I received this letter from a boy, aged nine:

"Please tell me whether there is a Santa Claus or not. Some folks say there is, but others say there isn't. What do you think?"

This question was answered in my story on "Old Saint Nick."

Another boy wrote telling me that he was "a reformed bean-eater." He said that he was through with beans for good.

"Did Robin Hood ever live?" asks Ferris Callihan, age 13.

That is a question not so easy to answer as it might seem. Robin Hood is a character in legend, and legends are sometimes true, sometimes false. We know that there were many outlaw leaders in English history, and perhaps there was one called Robin Hood. If so, he may have done some of the deeds told about in the Robin Hood stories, but we may be sure that many of his adventures were "stretched" by those who told about them.

The questions which are piled up ahead for me to answer would almost take your breath away if you could see them. I do not want that to keep you from writing letters to me; but for a few weeks I'd rather that your letters would be about general subjects. You might give me more and more hints about the topics you like best, or tell me how the Corner helps you at school. I am interested, too, to learn about your personal life, about your brothers and sisters, your pets and games. If you should ask a question, please do not be disappointed if the answer should not appear for several weeks. I am not sure that every question can be answered in the paper, but I am doing the very best I can.

I am not able to publish the "Round the World Notes" every day, but I shall include them in the Corner from time to time for some weeks to come.

Amusements

Coming to Atlanta.

Melody, beauty, dance and mirth, mingle against a lavish background overflowing with attractive girlhood in the "Greenwich Village Follies," America's greatest revue, which comes to the Atlanta theater for one week beginning next Monday night with matinees Wednesday and Saturday. In the two acts and over thirty scenes of the "Follies," travesty, burlesque, caricature and buffoonery mingle with pageantry. Brilliant ensembles and lithesome dance numbers by beautiful women of unsurpassed attractiveness, move in swift succession and scene of bright and riotous color make an entertainment of unexcelled variety and excellence. The production is of the glorified type, and a veritable feast for the eye and ear.

Seats for all performances are now on sale. Positively the first time to play in this city.

Loew's Grand.

Four shows will be offered today at Loew's Grand theater, where Lewis and Dody, comedians, are the headliners. Lewis and Dody sing their famous "Hello, Hello, Hello" song, which is one of the big hits of their act. Other popular acts on the bill are Margo and Beth revue of classical and popular musical hits; Jack and Reta LaPearl in their ludicrous "rube" comedy sketch; Gordon and Gordon in "Twists and Turns," and a funny sketch, "The Wedding Ring." The Loew feature picture for the week is "The Only Thing," Elinor Glyn's latest production.

At the Forsyth.

Sally Beers, the "Little Lilting Lady" who throws a sparkling personality into her character songs, is entertaining her audiences at Keith's Forsyth theater the last three days of this week where she is appearing as the headlining feature.

The program also includes the act of William Lemaire and Carol Raiston in a blackfaced comedy called "A Bad Move." Norris' Monkey Movie Stars are highly enjoyable in "Apeing Screen Favorites" and Jessie Block and Francine Dunlop present a miniature musical comedy called "Orchids." Frank Parish and Stephen Peru conclude the bill in a number of versatile stunts.

The Rialto.

"His People" is an appealingly sincere production.

Next week Bebe Daniels and Neil Hamilton will star in "The Splendid Crime."

New York, January 15.—(AP)—The cotton market continued quiet in today's early trading, but developed greater activity and strength during the afternoon on renewed covering by near month shorts. March contracts led the advance, selling up to 23.40, or 43 points net higher, and the highest price reached since they sold at 20.53 toward the end of November. March closed at 20.30, the general market closing steady at net advances of 8 to 33 points.

The market opened steady at an advance of 1 to 5 points, active months showing net gains of 3 to 7 points in early trading. Local traders seemed inclined to minimize the importance of higher Liverpool cables as representing the trend of the English market toward a normal parity with New York, and prices sagged off a few points under realizing. Otherwise there seemed little selling pressure, and the market firmed up again in the afternoon on reports of steadiness in the southern spot markets, rather a bullish view of week-end statistics based on the smaller into-sight movement and continued talk of shipments pending from the local stock. The strength of near months pulled up the later deliveries, but old crop premiums over the new crop increased during the day, partly due to selling of October and December against purchases of March and May. May sold up to 19.85, and October to 18.28, net advances of 27 to 43 points on old-crop months, and of only 8 to 11 points on new-crop positions. Last prices were a few points off from the best under realizing.

Private cables reported a less insistent spot demand in Liverpool, but that the improved demand for cotton cloths and yarns was fully maintained. Exports today, 44,233, making 4,962,276 so far this season. Port receipts, 46,198. United States port stocks, 1,639,845.

PRICES ARE HIGHER AT NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, January 15.—(AP)—The cotton market ruled quiet all morning but prices developed active trading during the afternoon and advanced sharply on covering by near month shorts. A sudden bulge in January started covering in that month which soon spread to March and there was more or less covering in later old crop positions. Prices had dropped to within a point or two of the previous close, rapidly advanced 40 points on January and 46 points on March, while later old crops advanced 23 to 24 points. There was more or less trade buying on the upturn as well as price fixing by New England spinners. A good demand for spots was also a stimulating factor. The close was a little off from the best, showing net gains for the day of 7 to 38 points.

At the start Liverpool cables were better than due and first trades showed gains of 6 to 8 points. Most months gained a point additional after the call, January trading to 19.98, March to 19.43 and May to 19.00. Prices gradually eased off during the morning, January finally trading down to 19.93, March to 19.38 and May to 18.94, or 8 to 9 points down from the highs and only 1 to 2 points above the previous close. These proved to be the lows of the day.

The afternoon rally carried January up to 20.33, March to 19.84 and May to 19.28, or 34 to 46 points up from the lows. In the final trading prices eased off 6 to 8 points from the best but the market was called firm at the end. Secretary Hester made mill takings only 351,000 bales for the week, which was disappointing but the movement into sight of only 267,394 bales was considered an offset. Total exports reached 39,233 bales. Coastwise shipments totalled 59,840 bales.

SPOTS IN NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, January 15.—(AP)—Spot cotton closed steady 37 points up. Sales 4,834. Low middling, 17.51; middling, 20.51; good middling, 20.76. Receipts, 12,912; stock, 493,860.

The Day in Finance

BY R. L. BARNUM.

Stock Market Has "Sinking Spells" — Increased Orders Shown by Wire Houses Prove That Public Is "Pulling Out." Brokers Close Doors When Break Comes.

New York, January 15.—Every day this week the stock market has had sinking spells at closer and closer intervals with the spells lasting longer. Wire houses here representing all parts of the country have shown throughout the week an increased number of selling orders. This undoubtedly means that the big outside public is getting out of the long side of the stock market.

For months W. C. Durant has been a big factor on the long side of the stock market. Early last Monday morning Durant had a train accident, causing professional traders in the stock market here and in Florida to go short of the market. This short selling ceased, however, when it brought about no outside liquidation. With Durant out of the market, however, this activity on the long side caused the market to go stale. This deadlock evidently was what decided many traders in the stock market on the long side to get out as they have been doing in increasing numbers for the past two days.

The feeling in the best quarters here today is that the technical condition of the stock market has been greatly improved by the real liquidation that has occurred during the past two days. In such quarters the feeling is that there will be a recovery in prices before liquidation reaches the proportions of last March or early last November immediately after Boston and other federal reserve banks increased their rediscount rates.

Offices Deserted.

Brokers' offices here in Wall street were practically deserted today for the first time since early last November. This always happens when there is a break in the stock market following an extended advance. Customers fearing a call for margins keep out of sight. In some strange way within a few minutes after a sharp recovery begins following such a market as was experienced today brokers' offices again fill up. How the news of a sudden break or recovery in the stock market gets around as quickly as it does is as great a mystery as where flies go in the winter.

Chesapeake and Ohio was down today over ten points from its high reached in anticipation of better terms in the Nickel Plate merger. Last year the price of this 4 per cent stock advanced from 89 1-4 to 130 1-2. Speculative holders of the stock evidently have been reaching the conclusion that with the Nickel Plate decision close at hand it is time to take profits.

It is no secret here in Wall street that Pennsylvania hopes to do some financing this year through the sale of stock and rumors are being heard that before the end of 1926 Pennsylvania will join New York Central, Atchison, N. & W., Illinois Central, A. C. L., Frisco and Southern as 7 per cent payers. Pennsylvania has been paying dividends without a break since 1856, the rate for most of the time during the past 35 years being 6 per cent. From 1893 to 1899 inclusive, only 5 per cent was paid and in 1921 and 1922 the rate was again dropped below 6 per cent. For a short period in part of 1906 and 1907 the company was on a 7 per cent basis. But the rate was again dropped to 6.

Pennsylvania has not been making much gain in gross earnings in recent years but long strides have been taken in getting the ratio of operating expenses to gross earnings back to pre-war normal. For 1920 Pennsylvania operating ratio was 104 per cent of gross. For 1921 it was down to 86. For the eleven months of 1925 at hand the figures dropped to 78.

Much Talk Heard.

Much talk was heard here today of the recommendation of Gates McGarrah, of the Mechanics and Metals bank, before the bond club that the stock exchange adopt a fortnightly settlement instead of the day-to-day settlement. McGarrah declared that 7 per cent call money one day and 4 per cent two days later is amateurish and disturbs the investment market and trade and commerce in general. Wall street believes that in time the London fortnightly settlements will be forced on this market by the demands of the investment market.

Western Union earned $129,260,000 gross for 1925, according to preliminary statement now at hand against $115,235,000 for 1924, $113,628,000 for 1923 and $107,116,000 for 1922. The surplus for dividends last year after appropriating $1,000,000 for cable developments was $15,170,000 contrasted with $12,336,000 for 1924, $11,608,000 for 1923 and $11,158,000 for 1922. For 1925 $15.19 a share was earned on the $99,817,000 stock against $12.35 for the previous year. This steady increase in earnings explains how the company was able last month to increase its dividend to 8 per cent. Under the management of George Gould, Western Union, which was part of the estate of Jay Gould, went to pot together with all of the other Gould properties. Under its new management Western Union has recovered its lost prestige as an investment stock. Its board of directors is made up today of representatives of various strong groups. The Kuhn, Loeb-Standard Oil crowd has R. S. Lovette, Paul M. Warburg, H. W. Deforest, P. A. Rockefeller, Mortimer L. Schiff, D. G. Geddes, Charles B. Seger, formerly of Union Pacific, now president of United States Rubber. Chauncey Depew and William K. Vanderbilt represent the Vanderbilt interests. The First National-Morgan interests are represented by William Fahnestock, William H. Truesdale, Howard Elliott. Directors such as William V. Astor, Oliver Ames look after their own invested capital.

There is only one federal reserve bank now, Dallas, that has a reserve ratio in the 40's against several a few weeks ago. Dallas now reports 47.4 against 45.0 a week ago and 62.3 a year ago. New York is the highest with 81.8 against 80.1 a week ago and 76.9 a year ago, with the system as a whole at 72.7 against 70.2 a week ago and 76.0 a year ago. The outstanding feature of today's weekly federal reserve statement reflects seasonal payments of bank loans.

President Seger, of U. S. Rubber, states that on December 9 his company acquired 5,700 additional acres or nine square miles of land in Sumatra for rubber growing and is now negotiating for another 12,500 acres. Last year the company's plantations yielded 20,000,000 pounds of rubber and it is estimated that within six years there will be an increase of 75 per cent.

'White Cargo,' Here Third Time, Pleases Big Crowd

"White Cargo," that tremendous drama of tropical Africa, with its "damp rot," its "mammy palaver" and its human wreckage, came back to the Atlanta theater last night for its third local engagement in two years. It was greeted by a larger crowd than attended the opening performances on either previous occasion, which is striking illustration of the impression it made on Atlanta theatergoers before.

It is unnecessary to consume valuable white space today in talking about the play itself. Anyone interested may refer to back files of The Constitution. There have been, however, several changes in the cast this season, and it is desirable to do a little comparing and so forth.

Changes in Cast.

Bernard Thornton, who played the "Langford" role last year, is the "Witzel" now. Changing from the "nice, clean boy" just out from England who succumbs to the lure of "Tondelayo," the half-breed woman, to the part of the cynical, bitter old stager of the tropics, is quite a jump, but Mr. Thornton proves his versatility surprisingly. It would not be strictly true to say that he is as splendid a "Witzel" as wos Cornelius Roddy last year, but he has only been in the part for a few performances, and he cannot be given too much credit for the work he does under the circumstances.

Ruth Hale is the "Tondelayo" this year. She makes the French blood stand out stronger in the character than did last year's "Tondelayo." Which is the best interpretation is doubtful. They are different, but both interesting.

Jack L. Leigh makes a good "Doctor," and leaves nothing unfinished about his importance. He is a shade less delightful than the performer who filled the role last year. Bert C. Wood is again the "Missionary," giving another perfect performance. Hooper Atchley is a new "Ashley," and, frankly, he is an improvement over the old one.

Same Fine Production.

Other roles are comparatively unimportant, and, while most of them are in new hands, they are entirely adequate.

The production is exactly the same, with the same shimmer of tropical heat that makes you live the abnormal life of those castaways from society as the drama unfolds before you.

The engagement is short this year, closing with a matinee and night performance today. You should see it, if you haven't already done so, and, if you did see it last year, you will be surprised at the manner in which it will grip you all over again.

PIPP BOUGHT FROM YANKEES BY CINCINNATI

New York, January 19.—(AP)—Wally Pipp, veteran first baseman of the Yankees, was sold today to the Cincinnati club of the National league. Pipp has been with the New York Americans 11 years and was a regular until last season, then he was succeeded by Lou Gehrig.

McTigue To Meet Georges in East

New York, January 15.—(AP)—The state athletic commission today approved a proposal by Jess McMahon, matchmaker at Madison Square Garden, to arrange a bout between Georges Carpentier and Mike McTigue, both former light-heavyweight champions, with the understanding that the winner will meet Paul Berlenbach, present holder of the 175-pound title.

Harry Greb, middleweight champion, will be requested by the commission to refrain from making any further ring engagements for the period between February 1 and 26, the date of the title match with Tiger Flowers at Madison Square Garden. Greb also will be asked to obtain releases, so far as possible, from present engagements in that period.

Tech Will Build New Ball Ground

Work has been started on Georgia Tech's new baseball diamond, according to officials at Tech. The new field will be located on the corner of Third street and Techwood drive, with the home plate on the corner near the entrance to the players' gate to Grant field.

The new baseball diamond has not been christened, but it is believed it will be named after some one of Tech's former stars.

While the remainder of the work is being done on the new baseball diamond Grant field will be plowed up as soon as the spring football practice is over, and will be made into one of the best football gridirons in the southern states.

Professional Named For Piedmont Park

William A. Lindquis, a golf professional, has been appointed to assume charge of the Piedmont park municipal course March 1, according to announcement Friday by L. L. Wallis, general manager of parks.

Mr. Lindquis is now a professional in charge of Forest Hills course in Decatur.

Derby Entries Close One Week Earlier

Louisville, Ky., January 15.—(AP)—Entries for the 52d Kentucky derby, to be run at Churchill Downs on May 15, will close February 15, one week earlier than last year, the Kentucky Jockey club sponsors of the classic have announced. The derby again will have an added value of $50,000.

Thorpe To Back Pro Footballers

Tampa, Fla., January 15.—Jim Thorpe, the big, husky Indian who used to strike fear into the ranks of opposing gridiron players when he led the Famous Carlisle Indians in offensives, has decided to substitute brain for brawn in athletics.

He is going thead with plans for organizing a winter professional football league in Florida, of which he probably would be president, but he's just going to play from the sidelines.

Thorpe's plan now, according to his friends, who say he may retire from active athletics, but refuse to believe he is making a complete exit, is to induce northern professional teams in the National league to come to Florida after northern play has ended. He would put a team in every city where it might pay.

Gun Club To Hold Its Regular Shoot

The Atlanta Gun club will hold its regular shoot today at the club despite the fact that several members are at Pinehurst, N. C., taking part in the tournament there. With a promise of fair weather, a large crowd is expected to take part in the shoot. J. H. Witamyer, of Chicago, a distinguished visitor and a promient figure in shooting circles, is expected to attend the shoot. Mr. Witamyer visited the club Wednesday and was very much pleased with the traps and location.

WEATHER FORECAST FOR COTTON STATES

Oklahoma: Saturday, partly cloudy to cloudy; Sunday, unsettled and colder.

East Texas: Saturday and Sunday, partly cloudy to cloudy, probably rain in south portion; colder Sunday except in southeast portion.

West Texas: Saturday, partly cloudy to cloudy, colder in north portion; Sunday, generally fair, colder.

Dry Goods.

New York, January 15.—Cotton goods markets were steady today. Fall River sales totaled 100,000 pieces, chiefly odd goods. Local sales were generally less than the output. Finished cotton goods were in much better demand but largely for nearby delivery. Raw silk was virtually unchanged. Silk printed goods attracted attention first hand markets. Many new wash goods and dress goods lines will be shown during the coming two weeks, chiefly in printed effects. Business is of moderate volume on worsted dress fabrics and rayon and worsted mixtures for spring.

SMITHIES PICK DAVIS AGAIN TO LEAD TEAM

BY BEN COTHRAN.

Moto Davis, star end on the Tech High football machine this year, was elected captain of the 1926 football team, and Carlton Parshall was re-elected alternate captain at the annual football banquet Friday night at the Peacock cafe. Parshall was a big factor in the backfield last season at fullback.

Eighteen men were given sweaters for their work on the football team and 28 men were awarded letters. Payne, O'Bear, Davis, Grubbs, Parshall, Bardwell, Hillburn, Martin, Heard, Henderson, Sewell, Maddox, Rasnake, Griffin, Royston, Davidson, Waugh and Cook were awarded sweaters.

The following men were given letters: Mabry, Battle, Henderson, Kimbell, Campbell, Hawkins, Nunan, Carlton, Heard and McCutcheon.

Several speeches were made by coaches, prominent alumni of the school and others. Joe Bennett, former Tech High and University of Georgia star, made an inspiring speech. Coaches of the junior high schools were present and presented stars of the respective schools.

Coffee.

New York, January 15.—Reactions in coffee futures today followed yesterday's advances into new high ground for the movement. The opening was unchanged to 15 points lower under realizing, probably promoted by the extent of recent advances rather than by any particular feature in the news. May sold off from 17.85 to 17.68 and closed at 17.83, the general market closing net unchanged on January, but generally 10 to 15 points lower. Sales were estimated at 70,000.

Closing quotations: January, 17.75; March, 17.87; May, 17.83; July, 17.63; September, 17.36; December, 17.15.

News, Views And Reviews

Stock Letters.

FENNER & BEANE.

New York, January 25.—Stocks continued under pressure in today's market and showed comparatively little rallying power. Almost from the start there was a resumption of pressure against a number recent prominent issues, especially in the motor group. Some railroad stocks also were without nearby support and registered losses.

During the afternoon the market showed better resistance to bearish efforts, but the bears were just as active and endeavored to locate easy spots in the market.

PYNCHON & CO.

New York, January 15.—The bearish element had the market pretty much to themselves today and pressed their advantage to the utmost. We see nothing more than temporary rallies and sharp declines in the immediate future. We advise a cautious trading position at this time.

JOHN F. CLARK & CO.

New York, January 15.—Notwithstanding that reports of his condition were reassuring today's market was still under the influence of professional bear attacks and nervousness as a result of an accident several days past to one of Wall street's most prominent operators. While a market as large and as broad as the present one cannot be said to be a one-man affair, nevertheless, it is a well-known fact that the commitments of the operator in question has been on an enormous scale and consequently a good deal of precautionary selling has taken place and still is taking place.

Cotton Letters.

FENNER & BEANE.

New Orleans, January 15.—Cotton was more active today and the market scored a substantial advance and maintained most of its gains. Efforts of shorts in the nears to cover, owing to strength of spots, steady withdrawals from stocks and more active dry goods news were the stimulating influences. Ability of the market to withstand pressure has held selling down to a minimum for some days, and the near approach of final setting day in January, with little or no prospects of tenders, proved too much for shorts. Contracts became scarce as soon as the covering started, adding to the uneasiness of shorts. The spinners takings were disappointing and exports showed further shrinkage, but the into-sight movement is falling off and the visible supply shows a substantial loss.

PYNCHON & CO.

New York, January 15.—The spot cotton situation appears unchanged in its strength and unaltered in the strong probability that business activity will become intensified. Trade in textiles as a whole is steadily improving. Reports from Manchester are decidedly more encouraging. We would look upon the present as a most inopportune time to voice an expression of disappointment regarding trade progress evidenced as yet in the new year or to prophesy pessimistically of future probabilities. We would assuredly not interpret indicated developments in terms of declining values.

H. & B. BEER.

New Orleans, January 15.—The undertone of the market remains good, owing to the bullish technical position of near deliveries, due to an apparent outstanding short interest, and because of the small certificated stock here and in New York. Of late there has been a better demand for low grades in the south, and the demand for white cotton and staples remains good, but offerings of good cotton remain light.

JOHN F. CLARK & CO.

New York, January 15.—Under the influence of scattered covering in March and May with contracts scarce, near months turned during the last half of the session. New crop months were sold against much of the purchases of the spring positions. There was no news but the recent steadiness of the market, particularly March, has created increasing nervousness amongst shorts many of whom apparently concluded to cover or transfer sales to October or December. Both March and May went through the "chart" points of 12 and 60 and this had an influence in the late trading. Traders are hopeful that today may be the beginning of the market pulling out of rut. Tenderable cotton is scarce and prices can easily work higher on any increase in speculation.

LIVINGSTON & CO.

New York, January 15.—The cotton trade realizes there will be an increase in the world's carry-over of American cotton this season but most generally speaking the end season supply is not thought likely to be heavy enough to materially modify the market's response to coming crop developments. No definite idea of the latter will be obtainable for another several weeks, however, and in the meantime the action of prices must be dependent upon more or less temporary factors such as the daily news from goods trade, the southern spot markets and the technical position of futures. The cotton carried over from last season and that which came here for December and January tender affords little protection for the March interest. Part of it is being shipped out and the unprotected state of short hedges in March and May is being emphasized by the reports of improving trade in the goods markets at home and abroad and by the continued absence of anything to indicate pressure of spot offerings in the south. This near month situation will probably soon be adjusted but the present tendency would appear to be toward a parity with southern spot markets both in Liverpool and New York while the trade shows little inclination to increase its holdings of early new corn deliveries above the 18 or 18½-cent level for October contracts.

HUBBARD BROS. & CO.

New York, January 15.—More encouraging news reached our market from Liverpool this morning indicating a much better business doing in Manchester. March, May and July were bought for foreign accounts during the morning session, causing decided strength in the near crop positions whereas new crops were neglected. Wires from the south reported basis better with good demand from spinners who were short. During the early afternoon old crops showed a good advance over last night's closing prices whereas new crops were selling only slightly over closing prices. From the action of the market it appears there is a decided short interest in March and May with a desire on the part of March shorts to cover on any weakness in that month. Yesterday March and May were selling at a difference of 48 points while today it was difficult to buy March at 54 points over May. The strength of the near position in all the markets including New York, New Orleans and Liverpool can be attributed to the small amount of deliverable cotton due to the weather that can be tendered under the U. S. cotton futures act. Should the south continue bullish with spot news from the south indicating good demand our market will remain steady with a tendency to advance.

ORVIS BROS. & CO.

New York, January 15.—Covering demand moved the price of cotton up sharply today. In the beginning cables were slightly better than due, but prices here did not respond to Liverpool's strength except in the instance of March, which barely responded. Immediately after the opening straddle orders to buy May and July and sell October and December dominated transactions, and this character of business, together with some liquidation of long Marches and the purchase of Julys constituted a large majority of all the transactions. In the afternoon, under the leadership of March, a covering movement began as quotations for March approximated the old resisting point of 20.12. Shortly after prices got through that level general demand developed and prices moved up to the day's best under this impetus, with realizing transactions turning quotations down slightly from the top on the close. The market's tone is strong.

C. P. ELLIS & CO.

New Orleans, January 15.—In view of the difficulty which short sellers have found in satisfying their contracts sentiment had undergone considerable of a change and the market will, in our opinion, continue to receive support from the strength of the near positions until the latter have reached a basis which will admit of freer deliveries.

Grain Letters.

FENNER & BEANE.

Chicago, January 15.—WHEAT: Started easier on the failure of Liverpool to fully reflect our advance of yesterday. Trade in the early session was decidedly broader, and on declines commission houses consistently absorbed the offerings, with closing prices ¼c to 1¼c under last night's close. The cash news was again strong, with No. 2 hard selling at 6 cents over May in store and 7¼c over for No. 1 hard on track. Winnipeg claimed liberal export flour sales and their market and Minneapolis were independently strong all day, evidently reflecting the flour business booked.

CORN: Corn met further liquidation, and in the absence of outside interest and with cash corn temporarily heavy, futures declined, closing about 1½c lower for the day. Primary receipts were somewhat large and country advices indicate freer marketings, with weather favorable. Cash corn was called 1c to 4c lower, with basis 6c

New York, January 15.—(AP)—Unsettled by the weakness of the stock market, bond prices turned reactionary today, with several sharp breaks taking place in convertible issues. The recent heavy drain upon investment funds resulting from large stock and bond offerings left little money available for the support of the market and the usual week-end realizing sales forced recessions throughout the list. Convertible rail and oil company bonds proved most susceptible to selling pressure today, following the downward trend of stocks. Chesapeake & Ohio 5s broke more than 3 points, Delaware & Hudson 5s a point, and the Skelley, Pan-American and Sinclair convertibles from 1 to 3 points. American Ice convertible 7s and American Writing Paper issues, which have been conspicuously strong in recent sessions, also fell back the former declining 6 points.

Uneasiness regarding the financial position of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company caused a sharp slump in its bonds, followed by an earlier break in the company's stock. Losses in these issues ranged from 1 to 2 1-2 points.

Reports of new financing continued to attract more attention in investment circles than the price movements of listed bonds. Early offerings will include $22,500,000 5 1-2 per cent bonds for the Western United Gas and Electric Company and a bond issue of about $35,000,000 for the Conowingo Falls hydro-electric development. Foreign loans under consideration include one of $20,000,000 for Italian public utilities and one which may run as high as $40,000,000 for Jugo-Slavia, if a satisfactory debt settlement is arranged here.

Sugar.

New York, January 15.—Raw sugar was less active today, but prices were unchanged at 4.11 for Cuban, duty paid. The only sale reported was 5,000 bags of Cuban for prompt shipment at the quoted price.

It was another quiet session in raw futures, and after early advances of 1 to 3 points, due to covering and trade buying, prices reacted under selling by Cuban interests. The close was unchanged to 1 point net lower on active positions, January, 2.34; March, 2.37; May, 2.40; July, 2.46; September, 2.51.

Refined was unchanged at 5.00 to 5.20 for fine granulated, with a better inquiry reported.

Fundamentalist Leader May Assume Pastorate Of Palm Beach Church

West Palm Beach, Fla., January 15. Indications that Dr. John Roach Straton, pastor of Calvary Baptist church in New York city and a fundamentalist leader, is seriously considering accepting the pastorate of the fashionable First Baptist church of West Palm Beach, were seen in his conference with officials of the church here Friday.

No announcement was made following the conference. The fact that he has returned from New York to confer with church officials, following a call extended to him two weeks ago, is considered a good sign by churchmen.

WILL ADD 150 WOMEN TO STATE COMMITTEE

Albany, N. Y., January 15.—The growing participation of women in politics was evidenced here Friday when the democratic state committee voted to add 150 women to that body, bringing the membership to 300. The motion to include the women was made by Tammany Leader George W. Olvany.

JURY ASKS CURB OF PARDON POWER

Macon, Ga., January 15.—(AP)—The Bibb county grand jury, in its presentments, delivered to Judge Malcolm D. Jones, in superior court late today, recommended that steps be taken to curtail the pardoning power of the governor and also to curtail the pardoning power of the board of pardons.

The grand jury cited instances of an increase in crime as due to the law's delay, referring to the alleged fact that 61 of the 400 crimial cases on the docket in this county have been pending for four years.

Another radical recommendation was that judges be appointed for long terms instead of being elected, and that the appointments be made by the governor on the recommendation of the bar association.

The representatives in the legislature of this county were criticised for alleged failure to work for the passage of a bill to consolidate the offices of county tax collector and county tax receiver.

The grand jury favored the extension of good roads. The report was rather voluminous.

South Atlanta Methodists End Annual Meeting

Adoption of several resolutions pertaining to the work of the conference during the ensuing year and an address by Dr. F. N. Parker, dean of the divinity school of Emory, featured the closing session Friday night of the South Atlanta Methodist conference at the Park Street Methodist church. The meeting has been in session through the entire week.

The conference decided to work for a ten per cent increase in membership of the churches of the conference; every member canvass for finances of the church; canvass for subscriptions for church paper during month of February; collection of centenary and educational pledges in the spring months; complete 60 per cent payment on fund for superannuated ministers; raise special mission fund during January and February, and 100 per cent payment on all benevolences.

"The Source of Our Power," was the subject of Dr. Parker's address. His speech was followed by a selection by a quartet from the St. Paul's Methodist church.

DECISION HOLDS UP CABINET FORMATION

Berlin, January 15.—(AP)—Dr. Luther has been held up in his negotiations to complete a new cabinet by the decision of Dr. Otto Gessler to relinquish the post of minister of defense, which he has held under seven chancellors.

Count Kanitz, food controller and minister of agriculture in the Luther cabinet which recently resigned, has also requested that he be relieved of the post and of further service in the new cabinet.

Deserted by his own party and weary with incessant radical hecklings Dr. Gessler today notified the chancellor that he had made up his mind unalterably not to join the new cabinet. Even the persuasion of President Von Hindenburg failed to move him.

Many Proposals Made To Solve Rubber Problem

Washington, January 15.—(AP)—Comprehensive proposals for immediate and permanent solution of the rubber problem were submitted to the house commerce committee today by representatives of the automobile and tire industries.

Virtual independence from foreign production by investment of American capital in plantations, chiefly in foreign countries, was advocated by Harvey S. Firestone, president of the Firestone Tire and Rubber company, of Akron, Ohio.

Utilization of wild rubber soures and promotion of conservation campaigns were urged by two directors of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, as safeguards against further increases in the price of rubber products.

Mr. Firestone also said it would help the situation if the government would back steps to remove laws in the Philippine islands which he described as an effective barrier against large-scale development of plantations.

Further material increase in the price of tires is inevitable if the present market level is maintained, declared Alvan Macauley, president of the Packard Motor Car company, representing the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

Miss Oak To Direct Peach Blossom Fete At Ft. Valley Again

Fort Valley, Ga., January 15.—(Special.)—Miss Pauline Oak, who has directed the pageants at all of the peach blossom festivals here, has been employed by the festival association to direct the pageant in 1926 and messages from her state that she will arrive from her home in Showhagen, Maine, this week and will be ready to begin work incident to staging the most stupendous pageant yet held.

Ralph Newton is general chairman of the fifth festival and Fort Valley folks are getting ready to make it the greatest yet held.

The Fort Valley Kiwanis club, with Judge A. C. Riley, president, is sponsoring the festival and he is urging the citizens to lay aside everything and put the festival over in a big way.

It takes quick and vigorous work to put on the peach blossom festival, but Fort Valley citizens think this a splendid way to put Georgia and the Georgia peach before the world and they will leave nothing undone that will make it a success.

Chairman Newton will soon appoint his subcommittees and the fifth festival will be of foremost concern in the peach city until it is over.

The date will be in March but it cannot be decided until an estimate of "blossom time" can be gotten, which depends on the weather.

COOLIDGE REFUSES TO BECOME MIXED IN WASHINGTON ROW

Washington, January 15.—(AP)—President Coolidge declined today to be drawn into the controversy over the personal habits of Georgia Washington.

"Well, the monument is still there," he drawled with a smile, and said nothing more.

JURY DEADLOCKED IN LANGSTON TRIAL

Griffin, Ga., January 15.—(Special.)—After considering the case for five hours tonight, at midnight the jury trying Arthur Alexander on a charge of murder in connection with the death of James C. Langston, rural mail carrier of Fayette county, was still out, with no indication as to when a verdict might be returned. Judge W. E. H. Searcy remained at the courthouse throughout the night, waiting for a verdict.

Alexander was the principal witness for the defense today, and claimed that the day that Langston was killed that he was busy elsewhere, "getting ready to make a run of liquor at a still."

Alexander is charged with being the driver of the car that carried several men to the scene where the mail carrier was slain.

Seven men have already been convicted in the case and given life sentences in the penitentiary. They were tried in Fayette county. Alexander is being tried here upon agreement of all parties concerned, in order that he would not be required to wait until the next term of Fayette county court, the Spalding court being in session here this week.

TWO BURNED TO DEATH IN WRECK OF AUTO

Macon, Ga., January 15.—(AP)—Two persons believed to be Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Belcher, of Leakville, N. C., were burned to death this morning several miles from Macon when a small automobile in which they were traveling crashed into a bank and turned turtle, pinning the occupants underneath.

The car caught on fire immediately after the accident and soon burned while witnesses hurried to the scene to rescue the occupants. Papers found among effects of the dead served to identify them as Mr. and Mrs. Belcher.

The car bore a North Carolina license tag, carrying the number 39-251, issued in July. This fact was established from a small plate carried in the pocket of the man. The suit worn by the man showed it was manufactured by a tailoring company in Baltimore, Md., and bore the name "J. Belcher."

Both bodies were burned and charred beyond recognition. The accident was witnessed by E. H. Mose, of Macon, who was a short distance behind the all-fated car. He hurried to the scene as quickly as possible and reached there in time to hear the cries of the woman for help. He said the car was quickly ablaze and that the bodies were charred black before he could remove them.

The car was going in the direction of Milledgeville. The bodies have been moved to a local undertaking establishment where they are to await positive identification.

League Rejoices As It Registers Treaties of U.S.

Geneva, January 15.—(AP)—Announcement today that henceforth the American government would transmit all treaties signed by the United States for insertion as part of the League of Nations treaty series means that the league's famous treaty series now can be virtually completed, league officials said tonight. It also means that new treaties entered into by the United States with Ecuador, Russia, Egypt, Afghanistan, Turkey and Mexico, which likewise are nonmembers, can form a part of the series.

The communication of the United States made it clear that its decision did not imply that its treaties were to be formally registered.

League officials said that they deemed the Washington action as a friendly gesture of cooperation with the league, carried out to further the policy of publicity and open diplomacy. They said there was a time when league communications remained unanswered for as much as eight months, while now all queries sent to Washington were answered promptly and fully; that the American government sends in regularly information on technical and substantial matters and has given complete information on such subjects as opium and white slave traffic.

SEEK TO PRODUCE ALLOY TO BE USED IN PLACE OF STEEL

Philadelphia, January 15.—(AP)—The Pennsylvania railroad is conducting experiments in an effort to produce an aluminum alloy that may be used in place of steel, and be both lighter and better than steel.

This was revealed today by General W. W. Atterbury, president of the company, who said, however, that the experiments had not progressed far enough to enable him to say whether they would be successful. The experiments are being made at the Altoona works under the direction of J. C. Wallace, chief of the motive power.

"In a year from now," said General Atterbury, "I may be able to say something definite regarding our experiments. They have not yet reached a point that would warrant a statement.

BERMUDA FORBIDS AMERICANS TAKING RUM ABOARD SHIPS

New York, January 15.—(By the United News.)—Bermuda has forbidden passengers for United States ports to carry liquor aboard ships.

This was revealed by posters in the public room of the Royal Mail liner Araguaya, which arrived here Thursday.

RALPH SIMS HEADS ATLANTA CLAIM MEN

Ralph G. Sims, brother of Mayor Walter Sims, was elected president of the Atlanta Claim Men's association at its luncheon meeting held Thursday at the Daffodil cafe.

James Frazer, of the United States treasury department, was elected vice president; Howard Gelbert, local claim agent of the New York Indemnity company, secretary-rteasurer, and Chauncey Middlebrooks, relected general counsel.

Smiths Return to City.

Former Senator and Mrs. Hoke Smith returned to Atlanta Thursday from Washington, where Senator Smith has been engaged as the Peru government's representative in negotiations with the Chilean government pertaining to the recent Tacna-Arica dispute.

Jugo-Slavia To Have Trial On Evolution

Belgrade, January 15.—(AP)—Jugo-Slavia, 70 per cent of whose population is illiterate, is to have an evolution trial.

The trouble was started by Bronislav Petronjevic, an eminent professor, who, in a lecture before a large crowd ten days ago, propounded the theory that man was descended from the monkey. There was little reaction among the audience and that part of the population to which the news spread, but a small village near Vranja took the statement more seriously, dividing into two factions, the one headed by the chief religious authority and the other by a schoolmaster named Karadjic, who upheld the evolution theory.

Finding that the "fundamentalist" cause was not gaining ground, the clergyman took the matter to the court at Vranja, charging the teacher with a desire to undermine religion and morality.

The case is to come to trial at Vranja, and Serbian and foreign newspapermen already are flocking to the town.

BOBBED HAIR HERE TO STAY SAYS HEAD OF BARBERS' UNION

Savannah, Ga., January 15.—(Special.)—Bobbed hair is here to stay, is the opinion of J. A. Shannessy, Indianapolis, head of the Journeyman Barbers' International Union of North America, here last night to speak before the local. He saw little chance of general change in prices for tonsorial work the new year.

He stressed cooperation in the trade and better sanitation in practice.

CLOTHING THIEVES KEEP POLICE BUSY

Mrs. Lula Ramsey, of 66 Woodward avenue, reported to detectives Friday that a quantity of clothing had been stolen from a clothes line in the rear of her residence.

Tarleton Collier reported the theft of a small amount of jewelry and a number of articles of clothing from his residence, 124 East Twelfth street.

B. F. McClung, of 156 South Moreland avenue, told detectives Friday that his residence had been entered by burglars and a suit of clothes stolen.

GORE AND BERRY WILL FACE TRIAL NEXT THURSDAY

Mell M. Gore and Theodore R. Berry, charged with the murder of William Cheek, Peachtree road grocer, December 19, will go on trial Thursday it was announced Friday by Lewis Jones, calendar clerk of Fulton county superior court. Gore is expected to face the court first, as the state has announced its intention of severing the cases.

The trials were slated to begin Thursday, but the Robert Hill case lasted longer than had been anticipated, and forced a postponement.

Gore and Berry have admitted that they entered into a plot to rob the Cheek store, but they charge that Jack Wilson, who is still a fugitive, fired the fatal shot. Ruby Ray, self-confessed lover and pal of Wilson, also claims that he shot the storekeeper. It was through her confession that Gore and Berry were arrested and that a nation-wide search was begun for Wilson.
